

CORN IS KING. HAIL TO THE KING!

FRANK W. BENEDICT OF BELOIT TAKES HONORS WITH SILVER KING CORN—WALLACE D. AUSTIN IS SECOND AND ELMER EGGEN, THIRD.

PRIZES AWARDED TODAY

Intense Interest Shown in Announcement of Ten Winners as Made by W. N. More for Judges—Prof. Norgord, Noyes Raessler and H. F. Bliss Give Addresses.

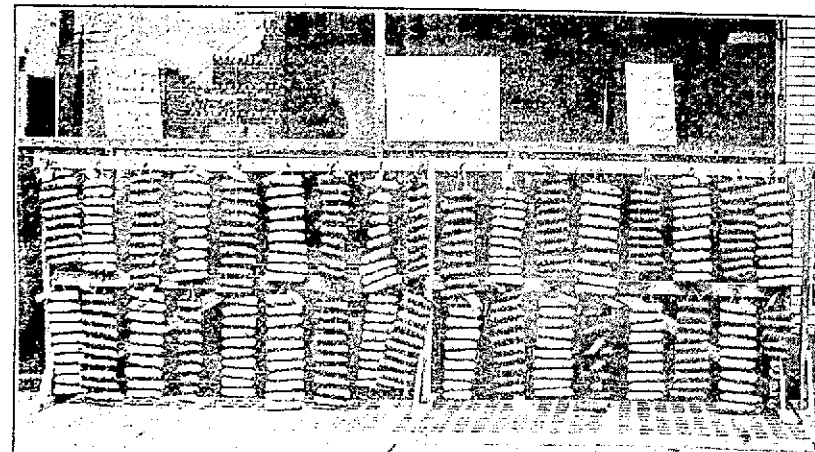

Nearly a hundred boys, anxious to close to the winner of the Winnebago county corn contest, many of their parents, year in which the yield was 110 bushels and others interested in the results, gathered at the city hall assembly room this afternoon to hear the final announcement which was read by W. N. More, one of the judges.

CORN EXHIBIT OF THE COMPETITORS FOR GAZETTE PRIZES.

Noyes Raessler, who has had charge of the field work of the contest, gave a brief address in which he commended the work which the young men had accomplished in the contest, and declared that Wisconsin was now walking up to the possibilities it possessed as a corn raising state. The boys have not secured prizes should feel rewarded for their efforts, he said, because they had made a noteworthy demonstration and had proved the superiority of pure-bred seed and scientific methods. If the boys have taken care to select seed corn, and have sown it in a successful manner, the first prize, declared Mr. Raessler.

Mr. Raessler called attention to the fact that the prize-winner in the Rock county contest had come very fields at the Wisconsin experiment station. Second, by planting only well cured seed, every ear of which was tested for germination, every kernel of which was full of vigor and capable of producing a strong stalk and a big ear. Third, by selecting soil well supplied with organic matter and filled with the three main plant foods, nitrogen, phosphorus and potash, by choosing a strong stalk and a big ear. Fourth, by selecting soil well supplied with organic matter and filled with the three main plant foods, nitrogen, phosphorus and potash, by choosing a strong stalk and a big ear. Fifth, by selecting soil well supplied with organic matter and filled with the three main plant foods, nitrogen, phosphorus and potash, by choosing a strong stalk and a big ear.

By analyzing the soil and supplying the deficient element of deeper plowing and the growth of legumes, the cotton fields of the south are in one season being raised in production from 1/4 bushel per acre to 1 1/2 bushels per acre.

The results obtained by these boys show that the soils of Rock county need examination, for their fertility elements; that increased yields would result from the application of the knowledge of that chemical analysis will reveal of the soils. In a similar manner by testing and remedying the soils by better plowing, by rotating crops, by better seed and care of seed, the crops of Rock county can be doubled and tripled. By continuing the increase of population at past rate, we shall soon reach the stage when we shall have to farm better and raise larger crops or starve. Denmark would be starving today instead of exporting more butter, eggs and meat products than any other country of its size, were it not for the tremendous strides of improvement that agricultural methods have taken. The farmers of the future must meet great competition and must learn to farm better. Denmark has improved through agricultural education. A country not so large as Wisconsin, she has twenty-five district agricultural schools and agricultural experiment stations and an expert agricultural advisor traveling out among the farmers in each of the twenty-five districts. The farmer well requires more scientific knowledge than any other vocations. The young men should prepare themselves for the future by getting an agricultural education. They cannot afford to miss it. What can they learn at the agricultural colleges? They can learn to analyze the soil and to correct its defects to make use of the bacteria which prepares the food of the soil for plants, which makes it possible to grow alfalfa, clover and other legumes. They can learn to determine the butter fat in milk and then be able to sell off the unproductive cow and keep the good one. They can become familiar with the breeding and improvement of livestock and other cultural plants. These are but a few instances in the vast field of agricultural science open to our young people.

Mr. Moore was the winner of the area yield contest in the United States contest throughout in 1911. So important was this victory that the young man was called to Washington to reside there and signally honored by the president personally. He was given a scholarship to the agricultural college of his home state, South Carolina, where he is now carefully preparing himself to go back to his home.

In this manner should we honor the winners in this contest. Let it not be forgotten that they have attained a great success in a great calling. To them the doors of our schools are open.

H. F. Bliss, president of the Gazette Printing Company, spoke to the boys in part as follows:

My friends—

I will not attempt to talk to you about how to raise corn, for that would be foolish. There was a time, a good many years ago, when I knew something about it. In fact, my last farming made an impression on my mind and that is still vivid and when I gave up the job after harvest and gave up the fourteen dollars a month to enter a drug store at half the money, I said, good-bye to hard work and looked for a life of ease. Experience and observation have taught me many useful lessons since and so I want to talk to you for a few minutes about contentment.

The Gazette had two or three objects in view in this corn contest when the boys have brought to a successful issue.

First, we wanted to demonstrate that Rock county soil was capable of producing large results when intelligently cultivated.

Second, to show that intensified farming was just as practical in Wisconsin as in any other state.

Third, and most important, to stimulate your ambition by making farm life more attractive as an income producer.

This contest influences in any way your determination to stay by the farm, the Gazette is well satisfied with the time and money invested for the future prosperity of the nation depends on the producers, and this new generation is the source of supply.

The average boy is not a day dreamer, and but little time is wasted in building air castles. There comes a time in his experience, however, when he does some sober thinking about the future, and when almost every line of work looks more attractive than the one in which he is engaged. This is especially true of the boy on the farm.

FEMININE GARMENT FOUND IN FREIGHT CAR IS A MYSTERY

Piece of Bloody Undergarment, With Revolver Nearby, Proves Puzzle To Aurora Police Department.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Aurora, Ill., Nov. 22.—A black soaked feminine garment which, with a blood bespattered school book and a revolver, was found yesterday in a car of lumber consigned from South Bend, Wash., was not a piece of a woman's undergarment, Captain of Police Virz said today. In the school book a certain grammar, the name of a girl, Miss Helma Day of Springfield, Ore., was written. The first theory of the police was that the child owner of the book might have been lured or dragged into the car and strangled and slain. Closer examination, however, convinced the authorities that it was a part of a woman's dress rather than that of a girl, and this belief was further confirmed today by word from Mrs. Helma Day, that her daughter was visiting there and was alive and well. Miss Day is seventeen years old according to word the police received today.

The bloody garment which they have found was evidently worn by a woman considerably above the average in height and weight. Miss Day thought Alice McCormick, a teacher of Springfield, Ore., might be the girl in the mystery. Other names in the book besides that of Miss Day were Dr. A. H. Day, Colville, Wash.; Charles Mantz, Colville, Wash.; Alfred Love, 522 Southeast Fifth St., Des Moines, Iowa; Mrs. C. J. Day, 20 North 26th St., Mrs. D. H. Smith, Unionville, Ia.

The car in which the bloody clothing was found was in transit since October 22 and was loaded almost to the roof with flat lumber. Both side doors and one end door were sealed. The end door was open near where the clothing and revolver were found. The clothing was about two and one-half feet square.

The police are now proceeding in the theory that a woman was murdered and that her clothing was stowed away in the car together with the inquiring revolver. As it was placed near the open door some of the clothing could have been worked out of the door near which it lay, they think.

Bloody finger prints on the edge of the small door through which the clothes and the books were evidently pitched into the car, were found later today by Captain Virz. Impressions were taken and the photograph will be forwarded to the various Oregon cities and Washington city because the impressions were made apparently by a man with short blunt fingers.

The gun found was a nickel plated Iver-Johnson 32 caliber No. 62507.

Miss Alice McCormick, a school teacher near Harrisburg, Ore., whose name was mentioned last night in connection with the box car mystery discovered at Aurora, Illinois, is at her home in Harrisburg. She said over the telephone today that she could explain the presence in the box car of the book given her by Elsie Day, who is in Illinois.

Colville, Wash., Nov. 22.—Dr. H. A. Day of this city, whose name was written in the blood stained schoolbook found yesterday in a box car at Aurora, Ill., confirmed today the statements of Des Moines that his adopted sister, Helma Day, whose name also appeared in the book, was in Iowa visiting her parents, Miss Day, he said, left Colville in August with her brother, Alfred Love, and stopped enroute at Spokane, until three weeks ago. The girl, he said, had been adopted by his parents when she was three years old.

Mr. Manufacturer Can We Help You?

This newspaper in connection with the other leading newspapers of the country is devoting much time and money to studying how to make advertising pay even in a depression.

It realizes that the possibilities of newspaper advertising are almost unlimited. The surface has hardly been skimmed. We believe that the great channels of commerce, the direct newspaper advertising in which manufacturer and dealer cooperate.

More manufacturers and more dealers are beginning to see this. The public appreciates this cooperation for it means better service.

If any manufacturer who is interested in co-operation with advertising will address the Bureau of Advertising, American Newspaper Publishers Association, World Building, New York, it will be glad to answer questions.

LABOR CONVENTION HAS BEARING UPON PREVAILING STRIKE

Federation Will Investigate Charge That Copper Mines Are Held Illegally—Election of Officers.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Seattle, Wash., Nov. 22.—The final day of the American Federation of Labor convention opened with the report of the committee on resolutions requiring a federal investigation of charges that several Michigan copper companies obtained possession of land illegally. A resolution disposing of the split in the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers recommended referring the matter to an executive council.

The election of officers fixed for three o'clock this afternoon was the engrossing topic. Second Vice President John Mitchell announced a year ago that he wished to retire from office in the federation. When he arrived in Seattle to attend the present convention he learned that a combination of conservatives had been formed to prevent him from naming John P. White, president of the United Mine Workers, as his successor.

Mitchell took small part in the convention, but he campaigned for White so well that on Thursday night it was said he had promise of votes enough to give him control of the entire administration if he wished, including the choice of himself as president to succeed Samuel Gompers.

Mitchell had refused up to today to discuss his position, but it was known that he was reluctant to displace Gompers and that he had been asked to take the presidency at the 1914 convention.

In the balloting John H. Walker, a socialist, held the 3,708 votes of the United Mine Workers of America, one-fifth of the total convention. The Western Federation of Miners, the brewery workers, the printing pressmen and the machinists were counted on to vote as Mitchell wished.

It would be the purpose of the radicals to stampede the convention for Mitchell, who is the only industrial unionist in the present executive board.

HARVARD WINS OVER YALE 15 TO 5 WITH FIVE FIELD GOALS

Old Eli Forced to Crimson Superiority at Cambridge This Afternoon in Championship Conflict.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 22.—The football championship of the east was won by Harvard today by a score of 15 to 5. Harvard went into the contest a pronounced favorite in the general betting, although Yale's backers did not hesitate to accept the alluring odds of ten to seven and ten to six against the Yale team. Football experts declared that the contest was practically an even money proposition. The game drew a record-breaking crowd of 47,000. The weather was fine from a spectator's standpoint, but the Indian summer air lacked the encouraging snap which puts life into football eleven.

Harvard scored two field goals and Yale a safety and one field goal during the first half. Seven and first half: Harvard 6, Yale 2.

Harvard scored another field goal after second period. Harvard scored two field goals and Yale a field goal at end of second period: Harvard 12, Yale 5. Harvard made another field goal. Final score: 15 to 5.

FINAL BATTLE FOR CURRENCY MEASURE

Legislative War on Today for Final Decision on President Wilson's Bill—Bills Changed.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Submitting a report for the administration democrats, Chairman Owen gave notice he would open debate Monday. Their bill would close "the lines of the house" currency and commodity only such amendments as President Wilson was willing to accept.

Senator Hitchcock, democrat, and five republicans, submitted a draft materially changing the bill and proposing four reserve banks owned by the public and controlled by the government.

WILL GIVE FACTS ON CONDITION OF AMERICAN INDIAN

Wilson's Representative on Investigation Through Tribes Says Gov. Enment Policy is Wrong.

Green Bay, Wis., Nov. 22.—When Dr. Joseph E. Dixon, who as the special envoy of President Woodrow Wilson to the Indians of North America has visited many tribes of Indians during his journey covering over 20,000 miles, reaches Washington within a short time, he will present some facts to Secretary of the Interior Franklin D. Lane, and Acting Commissioner of Indian Affairs E. A. Abbott, which it is believed, will cause them to realize that conditions on the reservations are not just as represented, that the Indian is not having the chance which officials themselves believe the government is offering him.

The Philadelphia man left Green Bay after a visit to the tribe of Oneida Indians near this city and has but one stop to make, that at the habitation of the remaining members of the Six Nations in New York state. After permitting the Six Nations to sign the declaration of allegiance to the United States and receive one of the flags given away by the Rodman Wampanoag expedition, Dr. Dixon will journey to Washington determined to show the officials some grave errors he believes the government is making in handling the Indians. He has gathered a fund of information on conditions under which the Indian of the mountain, the Indian of the plain, the Indian of the valley is trying to live, of rebuffs he is meeting at one time or another on account of acts of congress made while believing they were helping the Indians. Dr. Dixon believes the officials do not know the truth about conditions on the Indian reservation and he is confident that he can enlighten them because he has made a careful study of Indian life since leaving the east in June. Before he undertook the long journey through several states he had made a study of much as any man in the country of the handicaps which confronted the red man and made him lose hope and feel that the future held nothing in store for him. He has augmented that knowledge by a careful analysis of the conditions found upon his visit to each tribe while heading the Wampanoag expedition.

Seek Recognition.
Unofficial advice from the government agents in the section of Mexico where the constitutionalists are operating suggest a revival of a plan to seek recognition from the United States for a de facto government, claiming jurisdiction by right of possession; the establishment of a capital and of an organized administration in that part of the country north of a line drawn about due west from Tuxtam to Tampico.

Wants Conquest.
So far, however, the local constitutionalist representatives have been unwilling to admit that General Carranza would be satisfied with anything less than a conquest of the whole of Mexico and the elimination of General Huerta.

LATEST DIRIGIBLE STARTS ON FLIGHT

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Friedrichshafen, Germany, Nov. 22.—The latest of the Zeppelin warships, the Zeppelin 6th, ascended Lake Constance today and started on its first long-distance flight to Gotha. The dirigible is intended for service in the German army. Work is being pushed on the new naval Zeppelin which is to replace the first one destroyed on Oct. 17th when twenty-eight officers and men were killed. The ship under construction embodies improvements designed to prevent a similar disaster.

LAKE DRIES UP AND LAND BELONGS TO SHORE OWNERS

Madison, Nov. 22.—When a lake gradually dries up the property owners around the shores become the owners of the new land. This principle is enunciated in an opinion of V. H. MEXICAN CONGRESS SWAMPED IN TANGLE

CONSTITUTIONALISTS PLEDGE TO REFRAIN FROM MOLESTING PROPERTY.

BRITISH SHIPS APPEAR

To Protect Interest of Foreigners While Rebels Seek Recognition From United States.

Washington, Nov. 22.—Rear Admiral Fletcher cabled today that the battleship New Hampshire had left Tuxtam to return to Vera Cruz. Taken in connection with the pledge from the constitutionalist general, Aguilar, that his men would not molest foreign property, the movement was regarded as evidence of the restoration of order between Tuxtam and Tampico.

On the Chester.
The Madero Refugees were transferred late last night to the scout cruiser Chester from the battleship Rhode Island and the Chester sailed for Havana.

With the full realization that there probably can be no immediate developments in a diplomatic sense pending a clearing of the air, which the Mexican congress has involved itself, interest is now centered in the naval situation on the gulf coast. The approach of two British cruisers elicited a strong opinion of disapproval and that is taken as another sign that the United States and Great Britain are acting in perfect harmony as to naval forces to protect foreign interests.

Seek Recognition.
Unofficial advice from the government agents in the section of Mexico where the constitutionalists are operating suggest a revival of a plan to seek recognition from the United States for a de facto government, claiming jurisdiction by right of possession; the establishment of a capital and of an organized administration in that part of the country north of a line drawn about due west from Tuxtam to Tampico.

Bryan's Statement

Secretary Bryan issued this statement relative to Mexico City dispatches about the movement of British warships to Mexico.

The statement published this morning to the effect that the state department protested against the action of Great Britain in sending warships to Mexican waters is absolutely false and in denying the statement I desire to add a condemnation of the publication of statements of this kind without taking time to inquire into their truth or falsity. A denial cannot reach all who read the statement nor can it prevent the editorial comments that are provoked by the statements. Surely in international affairs there ought to be a patriotic desire to promote friendly relations and these cannot be promoted by the reckless publication of false statements in regard to the acts of government officials.

Deny Christmas Story.
Magdalena, Sonora, Nov. 22.—Absolute denial was made today at the corporate constitutionalist headquarters here that the reported arrival of Gen. Lee Christmas, American soldier of fortune, in recruiting Americans at Chicago had any connection with the constitutionalist movement in Mexico. A hard campaign along the west coast awaiting his general, Venustiano Carranza, the Mexican constitutionalist chief, prolonged today his stay in this town.

Carranza will entertain tonight with a dance for townspeople and officers of his staff.

Carranza Lingers.
Although Gen. Carranza announced before leaving Nogales that he would sail for a social visit here it was today said by members of his party that possibly the prolonged stay here was due to other reasons.

Carranza has been in close touch by telegraph with the situation both in the interior of Mexico and the United States. From the reports he was reported today that General Obregon's federalists again attempted a sortie out of Guaymas. Two federal columns which assaulted the rebel fronts at Matamoros and north of the gulf ports have been driven back it was said.

Federals Active.
El Paso, Tex., Nov. 22.—Federals are within 32 miles of Juarez, according to the rebels now holding the border Mexican town of Panto Villa, and 1,000 men have gone out to meet and fight them.

This statement was made at 10:30 this morning in Juarez to an Associated Press representative by General Jose Rodriguez, one of Villa's principal lieutenants.

Make Claims.
Mexico City, Nov. 22.—Mexican newspapers under government domination published on their front pages today long articles denouncing the intention of the United States government to recognize Provisional President Huerta in the near future.

El Financiero denied that a seven column headline reading "Huerta will be recognized by the American government" was published in the paper.

The foundation for this optimism appears to be cablegrams received here by foreign business men, describing the horror felt by President Wilson at the killing of federal prisoners when the rebels took Juarez.

URGE TEACHERS TO PAY ATTENTION TO SANITATION RULES

State Board of Health Have Sent Rules to Prof. Buell for Future Reference.—Many Stringent Measures.

The new rules relating to the sanitary care of schools, as laid down by the state board of health, January 25, 1913, have been sent to the local high school from Madison, for distribution among the teachers of the city schools. The object is to urge all teachers to pay more attention to the sanitary methods as they should be attended to.

One important measure, as adopted, is as follows: All teachers, school authorities, and health officers having jurisdiction, shall not permit the attendance in any private, parochial or public school of any pupil afflicted with a severe cough, a severe cold, diphtheria or other venereal or contagious skin disease. The teachers in all schools shall, without delay, send home any pupil who is obviously sick, even if the ailment is unknown, and said teacher shall inform the parents or guardians of said pupil and also the local health officer as speedily as possible, and said health officer shall examine into the case, take such action as is reasonable and necessary for the benefit of the pupils and to prevent the spread of infection.

The parents are obliged to keep their children home in case of sickness. Teachers should remain at home also when afflicted with such diseases. Air and Food Space, Duty of Health Officers, Ventilation, Heating, Sweeping and Cleaning, Drinking Water, and Food, are the subjects discussed in the pamphlet on rules.

Characteristics of the infectious diseases are carefully explained, including tuberculosis, scarlet fever, diphtheria, measles, whooping cough, typhoid fever, smallpox, German measles, croup and chickenpox.

The general opinion is that many of these rules are very stringent. Every year there are perhaps from fifty to one hundred deaths among the population of the schools who have coughs, some very severe and some not so bad. If this rule were obeyed to the limit, it would mean that perhaps for a week or two, about one-quarter to one-half of the students would be attending school regularly.

The parents should take more pains with their children, and see that they take no severe colds. A cold will develop in a short time into many infectious diseases. These rules should be obeyed, and there is no other way out of it, but the parents are largely to blame for their children catching colds, when a warmer wrap, or a pair of rubbers, brought out of the closet in a hurry would perhaps prevent the very beginning of hoarseness.

ENTERTAINS CHILDREN IN HONOR OF BIRTHDAY

A party of young people were delightfully entertained on Tuesday evening at the home of Dr. and Mrs. M. A. Cunningham, Milwaukee avenue, the occasion being the birthday of Miss Constance Cunningham.

The children were dressed to represent colonial ladies and spent the evening in games and music. A three course supper was served at which Thomas Nuzum and Austin Sprackling, dressed as dandies, served as waiters upon the little guests. Those present were: Ann Jackson, Josephine Carlo, Alice Burlew, Helen Wilcox, Elizabeth Mound, Mildred Smith, Gretchen Erick, Gwendolyn Jacobs, Esther Yahn, Ethel Sennett, Emily Wilbur, Mary Folds and Peggy Smith.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Johanna Tank.
The final call came to Mrs. Johanna Tank, wife of Charles Tank of Alton, last night, after an illness of four weeks' duration. She had been in poor health for most of the past year and her death was due to a general breaking down. Born near Berlin, Germany, May 7, 1847, she had lived sixty-six years an upright, Christian life; the last thirty of which were spent at Alton.

A good wife, a mother in every sense that the name implies, and a kind friend and neighbor. She was known and respected by a wide circle of friends and her going will be keenly felt by many.

Of her immediate family that are left to mourn her there remains her husband, Charles Tank, a daughter, Mrs. Bertha Whitmeyer of Alton, a daughter, Mrs. Anna Matthews of this city, and two sons, Albert Tank of Yankton, South Dakota, and William, who will be unable to be here for the funeral.

Rev. J. C. Hazen of the Baptist church of this city will conduct the funeral services, which will be held from the home in Alton at 1:30 o'clock afternoon and from the Alton Baptist church at two.

OPINION GIVEN AS TO INSANE PATIENT'S PROPERTY

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Madison, Nov. 22.—Before a district attorney can begin action to collect from the property of an insane patient in an insane hospital, the amount charged to and by a county for such support, he must be directed to take the steps by the county board, in rendering this opinion to District Attorney Ellis, Jackson county today, Attorney General Owen holds that it is the county board which has to take the initiatory steps in this matter.

Pure Gold.
Pure gold is considered as divisible in respect to purity into 24 parts, each called a carat, (or karat), an old term for one-twenty-fourth of an ounce, Troy. Hence the phrase 18 carat fine means that 18 twenty-fourths is pure gold, and the remainder an alloy material. Ordinary gold chains and jewelry are usually only 14 carat fine, but wedding rings are 23 carats fine.

Beautiful Autumn.
There are those who shudder at the approach of autumn, and we feel a light grief stealing over their spirits like an October haze. But is not autumn the manhood of the year? Is it not the ripest of the seasons? Do not the proud flowers blossom—the Goldenrod, the Orchis, the Dahlia, and Bloody Cardinal of the swamp lands? —D. G. Mitchell.

CONTEST WINNER RAISES 109 BUSHELS ON ACRE OF GROUND

The city with its attractions, appeals to him, and often the temptation to forsake the farm is too strong to resist. What happens when he yields? He accepts the first position that offers, becomes a routine worker, with a very moderate income. Marries without prospect, and before he is thirty, finds himself with a family to support on a salary, which means a struggle for existence. This is not fiction, but every day experience which a little observation will substantiate.

There are just two channels of work open to young men when they leave home and strike out for themselves, and I wish that every boy in the land could be impressed with this fact in making his choice, for destiny is in the balance.

One channel is always crowded, because it is easy of access. It accommodates all the drifters and many others who fail to recognize its significance.

This highway is known as the routine channel, where men become automatons, and where vacancies can usually be filled the day they occur. It takes in a great army of clerks and office people who work year after year on a fixed income, which seldom advances because of sharp competition. The pay is less than skilled labor demands in the industrial world, and the future outlook is not hopeful.

The other pathway is known as the creative channel. It is filled with all kinds of possibilities, and never crowded. The men who occupy it are the men who do things. They create a market at home and abroad for the products of mill and factory, and keep the wheels in motion.

They are brain workers, so absorbed in their mission that the time clock and whistle never annoys them, and they furnish the captains which go to the front in all the world's enterprises.

You are fortunate as farmers' boys in a birthright inheritance which places you in this choice creative column. The acre of corn is simply suggestive of its great possibilities. Stay by the farm and your partnership with God and nature will command success and rare content, which is the essence of happiness.

All the boys entered in the contest were the guests of the Gazette at the afternoon performance at the Apollo theatre.

He returned to Jefferson this week and will be engaged all week in the trial cases at that county seat. He will return to this city for a session of court a week from Monday.

STATE MAKES FIGHT ON WESTERN UNION

Action in Which Wisconsin Seeks to Revoke Company's License in Federal Court Monday.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Nov. 22.—Assistant Attorney General J. E. Messerschmidt will appear before Federal Judges C. C. Kohlsaat, F. A. Geiger and A. L. Sanborn in Chicago on Monday morning to represent the state of Wisconsin's claim that the charters of the Western Union Telegraph company and the Philadelphia coal and iron company in Wisconsin should be revoked. Attorney Rufus B. Smith of this city will represent the corporations in the suit.

Temporary Injunction.
The Western Union company now has a temporary injunction restraining the Wisconsin secretary of state from revoking its license, and in court next Monday it will ask that it be made permanent. The case originated in a suit brought several years ago by Walter L. Hauser of Mondovi, Wis., as trustee of David Hauser, for damages of $15,000 for alleged failure of the company to deliver a telegram sent from Philadelphia, Pa., to Mondovi. The company transferred the case from the state court to the United States district court here. This action is held by law state to be contrary to a state law. In Continental Insurance company versus Peter Doyle, secretary of state, Chief Justice Brandeis many years ago, held that the state may cancel the license of a foreign corporation for any reason. On appeal, the United States supreme court adopted this view, and it has since been confirmed by other courts. In the Western Union case, however, other questions enter.

Claims of Company.
The telegraph company contends that it is a corporation engaged in interstate commerce, and that Wisconsin law forbidding the transfer of suits from state to federal courts cannot hit it. Still stronger, however, is its claim that it is an agent of the government in carrying messages, and that the state dare not interfere with its business in Wisconsin.

In the Philadelphia and Reading case, which is brought against the secretary of state and attorney general of Wisconsin, Ole Huen of Superior brought suit for personal injury at the company's Superior docks. The company took the case to the United States court in this city in alleged violation of the state statute quoted above. According to the attorney general the statute makes it the duty of the secretary of state to revoke the company's charter in taking such action, and of the attorney general to enforce it. The company calls the law unconstitutional.

OLD AND NEW JAPAN SEVERED BY DEATH

Last of the Shogun Rulers Dies At Tokio. Was Defacto Ruler of Old Japan.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
New York, Nov. 22.—The death of Prince Keki Tokugawa announced in a brief cablegram from Tokyo today severs a connecting link between the old and new Japan. None of the contemporaries of the Pre-Meiji era or the days of the Shogunate enjoyed such distinction as hedged about Prince Keki "the last of the Shoguns." In these later days of the era of enlightenment in Japan it is doubtful if the average foreign visitor or even president was aware of the nobility of a man who barely 50 years ago was the de facto ruler of Japan.

NOVEL FEATURES ARE BEING ARRANGED FOR THE ELKS' CARNIVAL

Ideal Way in Which to Welcome New Year Projected by Arrangement Committee.

"There is no doubt but the coming Elks' Carnival on the afternoon and evening of December 30th and 31st are going to be a revelation to the general public," said Chairman Frank Hayes of the Elks' Committee having charge of the affair, this morning. "W. H. Smith, one of the new owners of the Grand Hotel, who has so kindly volunteered his services as director, has had experience in this line before, and is full of ideas that are novel and entertaining. Mr. Smith is an Elk of long standing and has taken part in several similar 'stunts,' so is well versed in just what to do. He has communicated with the tinging Brothers, the Gollmar Bros. and other prominent Elks, who are slowmen, and they promise added features for the big event."

Mr. Hayes might have added that the plan for welcoming the new year on the night of the 31st will be most unique. Thus far the exact program is a secret but it is safe to say that it will rival the famous New Year's program of this city. Philadelphia New Year's Clubs which have become a feature in the state old Quaker City. With two bands playing, the Bower City and Moose band, if present plans are carried out, the bridge gaily lighted and every street leading toward the Auditorium, where the "big doings" will be held, it promises to wake up Janesville as never before on this memorable night.

The publicity end is to be well looked after and it is safe to say that Janesville will receive lots of free advertising throughout southern Wisconsin and northern Illinois, wherever there is an Elks lodge. Already invitations have been sent out to many of the neighboring lodges and it is expected large delegations will be present. The entertainment part of the program will be partly amateur and partly professional, as some of the best citizens of this town are being negotiated for. As many of these are members of the order, it will give added interest to the affair.

Looking back we find that football was quite a different game in this country fifty years ago. When the early form of what is our present-day football was first played by American colleges there were as many as twenty-five men on a team and very few rules at first, the general idea being to get the ball between the goal posts. Records show that in one of the first games played between Rutgers and Nassau Hall, better known as Princeton today—in 1869, the first mentioned team won the game with a score of six goals to four. That was the first game played under American rules. Other games had been played before, sometimes under the English rules and sometimes with scarcely any rules at all. Some of the early rules of the American game follow:

There must be no throwing or running with the ball, and such constitutes a foul, when the ball must be thrown perpendicularly in the air by the guilty team. There must be no holding of the ball nor free kicks. When a ball passes beyond the limit of the field by the side of the goal it shall be kicked on from the boundary by the side having the goal. When the ball passes beyond the limit at the side of the field it shall be kicked on horizontally to the boundary by the side which kicked it. On this shall be no holding or tripping of players.

"One-Round" Hogan is back in the fight game with lots of added punch and weight and is planning to make the welterweights work for Hogan. It will be remembered that Hogan created a very favorable impression in lightweight circles some while ago and gave promise of cutting quite a few capers in his class, but the white lights and the gay life of Broadway seemed to get in his hair. Hogan became so engrossed in Buchananian pastimes that he seemed to have little time for boxing and training and he soon fell by the wayside. Hogan is now spending some little time out on the coast regaining his former physical excellence and seems to have fully recovered. In fact, his manager, Jimmy Howard, declares that he is

LARGEST STADIUMS ARE TOO SMALL TO HOLD VAST CROWDS

No College Stadium Ever Built Able to Seat Crowds at Champion Ship Games.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] New York, Nov. 22.—The enormous demand for seats at the big inter-collegiate football games in all parts of the country this autumn presents new problems for the undergraduate and graduate managers which they are having great difficulty in solving. No college stadium has yet been built that afforded ample seating accommodations for the most important game of the schedule. It is always necessary to curtail the allotment of coupons, and in many cases to return hundreds of applications because of the impossibility of seating the thousands who are willing to pay from two dollars to three dollars for tickets and spend from fifteen dollars to fifty dollars additional for transportation and hotel accommodations previous to the game. In no case has the increased seating capacity of new stadiums kept pace with the interest in football and the demand for tickets. The task of handling the applications outgrew the undergraduate football managers years ago and at present a corps of stenographers and a large clerical force is necessary to open, file and reply to these requests of seats. This situation applies, of course, only to the most important and closing games of the season, but the work and detail required in systematically caring for thousands of applications and postal orders covers several months. In the case of the Yale-Harvard, Army-Navy and Princeton-Yale and games of similar type, the mail arrives by bagful in every delivery. It remains for the management to apportion tickets representing less than 50 per cent. of the total application in such a way that undergraduates and alumni may have first call on the coupons. The chance of the average outsider may be gleaned when it is stated that with 45,000 seats available for the Army-Navy game there were 150,000 applications. The Harvard game, where the Yale-Harvard game is played today, holds with temporary additions about 40,000 spectators. According to Graduate Treasurer F. W. Moore, of the Harvard Athletic association, 150,000 seats would be needed to fully supply the demand. In writing of the rules governing the distribution of the tickets and the problem in general Mr. Moore says:

"The whole object of all these rules, however, is to distribute an utterly inadequate supply of seats in the fairest possible way among Harvard men. They are the result of the experience of all the men who have been concerned for the past twenty years with the handling of our great game. Since then our graduate list has been growing at the rate of nearly a thousand a year, and the proportion of the younger graduates who wish to attend the games is much greater than in the older classes, because they have been brought up on football in school and college, and naturally have more interest in the game itself.

"The whole trouble is a nutshell

WILLIAMS RELATES OF TENNIS MATCH FOR DAVIS TROPHY

Richard Norris Tells How Americans Defeated English Team, Regaining Davis International Cup. (BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

How it feels to play in the challenge round of the Davis cup, emblematic of the world's tennis championship, is vividly described by Richard Norris Williams, second, who with McLaughlin, Hackett and Johnson, formed the United States team that regained the famous trophy in England this season. His story as printed in a publication at Harvard university, where he is a sophomore, is in part as follows:

"We were in the challenge round with the hardest task before us. Six or seven previous American teams had reached just this point in the last eight years, but none had been able to lift the cup. On the Saturday after we played Canada, we went down to Poikstone and there spent a couple of quiet days, not talking or even thinking of tennis. The rest did us a lot of good, but the strain was gradually telling. No one can imagine the mental strain under which we were playing. After two long months of play, a little slip, an 'off' day, an injury to a member of the team, might mean the loss of the Davis cup. We all fully realized this, but we went into the matches with confidence. We were determined to go our best, which was all that American could ask.

"The draw for the challenge round was made on the Wednesday before the matches were started. McLaughlin was to play against Parke at 2:30 and I was to follow against G. P. Dixon after the first match was over. On Friday morning we took things fairly easy. 'Mac' had his lunch about 12:30 and left in the car for Wimbledon at about 1:30. I had my lunch at about 1:30, and then I took things quietly until 2:15, when I followed him to Wimbledon.

"When I reached the court I was told that things were not going our way. I then spent the worst hour and a half of my life. I could not imagine what was of course, not allowed to watch the match, as it is trying on the eyes; so I lay down in the dressing room while the attendant came to tell me now and then how the score stood. At about 5 o'clock the sound of shouting and applause announced McLaughlin's defeat. It was a bad beginning, for everybody expected that 'Mac' would win. Later I managed to put the tide our way a bit by beating Dixon.

"On Saturday the public certainly got their money's worth out of the do-or-dies. It was without doubt the most exciting doubles match I have ever watched, especially as I was rather interested in the outcome. I remember when the score stood 2 sets to 1, 5 to 4 and 30-40 (McLaughlin serving) for England, R. D. Wrenn, the president of our association was chewing his straw hat, and G. Johnson, the fourth member of the American team, was absolutely unable to light a cigarette. What was I doing? Well—I really don't know.

"We spent Sunday quietly in the country and on Monday started our last lap. McLaughlin again played first, and this time when I arrived at Wimbledon 'Mac' was two sets up and had a long lead in the third. The playing was lighter, less exciting than on the previous Friday. A few minutes later the tide was won. After ten years it was to come home again. I finished out my match against Parke, although the outcome would not have altered the fate of the cup. As a matter of interest, I lost in five sets."

They can't keep that Larry McLean person out of the public prints. Ever since he was sent down to New York from St. Louis Larry has been coming in for his quota of publicity. First he managed to join the Giants just in time to dip in on the world series change and then he was discussed a little when the news spread around that he had not received his share of world's series coin. After that little matter had been settled and everyone was satisfied that he had been given what was coming to him, the story came out that he was to make a W. J. B. lecture tour in exhibiting as the horrible example. Later the news came that he was smashing all records at bowling around Brooklyn, where he is living this winter. He followed that up with something like 250 for a long string of games. But the most recent yarn that has been credited to him is that he has turned inventor and has devised a prior baseball game which it is thought will make him wealthy. All of which may be true, but it is hard to reconcile McLean with anything in the nature of a parlor plaything.

JANESVILLE PLAYING MONROE HIGHS TODAY

Both Elevens Are Waging Crucial Contest at Driving Park This Afternoon—Locals Rule Favorite.

With Janesville ruling the favorite over the Monroe high school eleven at the Driving Park this afternoon, the game called the "game of the season" is being played. The game is being played at two-thirty o'clock. Seavert was favorite again for quarter-back, and Curtis sent him to the pivot position for the locals. Dearborn and Atwood made up the halves, with Dalton at fullback. Mount started at center, with Badger and McCulloch at guards. McVicar and Jones were sent to right and left tackles respectively. Smiley and Mooney began at ends. A string of subs lined the sidelines for both schools.

The crowd at today's game is the largest of the season. Raymond Barnes, the demon cheer leader, was on hand early, inspiring the eleven with many cheers and yells. Following is the Monroe lineup for this afternoon:

Haase, I. C.; Hartzell, I. T.; O. Thorpe, I. G.; Moo, C. T.; Thorpe, R. G.; Geiger, R. L.; Guhl, R. C.; Voss (Center), C. H.; Hosely, I. B.; Wagner, R. B.; Holloway, E. B.

Both elevens weigh practically the same, although the locals have the advantage of perhaps five pounds. Monroe averages about 145, while the locals will tip the beam at 150 lbs.

The Narragansett track at Providence, which discontinued racing several years ago, has applied for readmission to the circuit. The schedule, which may have to be enlarged to include these two tracks, will be gone over at tomorrow's meeting, but will not be adopted until the stewards hold their regular annual meeting in

SOPHOMORE-JUNIOR CONTEST ON MONDAY

The football championship of the high school will be decided on Monday afternoon, when the elevens representing the sophomore and junior classes battle at the Driving Park griddon. Coach Coplan is showing a good deal of interest in his sophomore aggregation, for he believes they will win by a big score. On the other hand, the juniors are heavy, and with Harry Fuchs, their field general and a whirlwind a victory is expected. The contest will be a battle between Fuchs and Spohn and their judgment of plays. Both lines are of equal strength, and to pick the weak spots in selection of tricks and plunges will be the task of the two pivot men. The entire student body are planning to attend the game.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

"Man wants but little here below,"
That was an ancient song;
We do not hear it now, you know,
The sentiment is wrong.
Man wants just now all he can get,
In way of worldly tin;
The way that some get after it
Seems like a very sin.
Man wants a fancy touring car,
He wants a private yacht;
He wants to get a lot of junk
His neighbors haven't got.
He wants a lot of suits of clothes
And rare gems for his wife;
He wants a chateau by the sea,
To make complete his life.
He wants a lot of stocks and bonds,
And Standard Oil preferred;
He also wants a lot of things
Of which he never heard.
He doesn't really want them,
In true sense of the term;
But thinks he does and that's the same.
And he'll work and squirm
To garner everything in sight
And keep it stored away.
He saves a lot of useless junk
To meet the rainy day;
And when he dies and passes on
He leaves it all behind.
Because he cannot take along
A thing of any kind.
'Twould suit a lot of men, first rate
If they were but endowed
With brains sufficient to invent
A pocket for the shroud.
—Chicago Post.

There has never been a time in the history of the American people when "wants" were so much in evidence as they are today. The reason why, is not difficult to trace.
For the past eighteen years the nation has enjoyed an unbroken era of great prosperity. There has been no suggestion of hard times, and but for the financial flurry of 1907—which was short-lived—not a rattle has occurred to check the ever-increasing tide.
The significance of national prosperity has been fully realized, for it has been so universal that all the people have shared in its benefits. While the manufacturers, the transportation companies, the merchants and farmers, have made money, the laborer has found employment at good wages, and the empty dinner pail has not been a part of the daily program.
When money comes easy it goes easy and wants multiply so fast that it keeps the most of us busy trying to gratify them, without regard to whether they are real or only imaginary.

We expect the boy to want everything in sight. If his chum, across the street, has a pony, there is no reason in the world, in his own mind, why he shouldn't have one, but the father comes in as a stopper to his ambition, and then goes out and buys an automobile, not because he needs it, or can afford it, but simply because he happens to want it.

A man was foolish enough to buy a big mahogany davenport, a time ago. It wasn't any more comfortable than the leather couch, which had long done service, but it looked better. When it was sent home, the discovery was made that it wouldn't go through the narrow hallway to his upstairs rooms. So it was hoisted up on the roof of the veranda and a carpenter sent for to take the castings off from a window, so that the measly thing could be given shelter.

After it was installed it overshadowed everything else in the house. His wife was a good, patient, soul, and while she didn't say anything, she looked eloquent, and the next day a furniture dealer was persuaded to part with several valuable pieces to go with the davenport. Asked if he ever used the new stuff the man said "No," it was too nice to use, and he has just discovered that the moth has made away with the most of the cover, and he hoped they would eat up the frame.

Ever see such a man, or ever run across a woman made up in that way? There are plenty of them at large, and they are usually the people who do the most howling about the high cost of living.

One of the magazines had a story, a while ago, about a man in an island city who found it necessary to have more capital in his business. He had an income of a couple of thousand dollars a year, but like the average man, spent it about as fast as it came in.

His wife happened to be a sensible kind of a body, and together they discussed the situation and finally decided that the best way to secure capital was to create it, so they agreed for the next two years to live on fifty dollars a month.

At the end of the first year they furnished by request a detailed statement of expenditures for publication, which included meat and all other items. It was a wholesome list, and the family of four went through the year with all actual needs satisfied. They cut out a lot of luxuries which they had so long enjoyed that they seemed like necessities, entertained less company, but retained the respect of all the friends worth having, and when the two years had passed, the business was thriving, through reinforced capital, and the lesson in economy had been studied to a purpose.

Of course there are many families who live on from fifty to seventy-five dollars a month. In fact that is about the average wage in many of the industries, but these are not the people who are given over to extravagance.

The salaried people with incomes from a thousand a year up, the trades people and professional men, with flexible incomes, are the people who aspire to be high rollers, and from this class come all the tragedies in crime and failure, in the financial world.

The labor world is open to criticism, along some lines, but it is free from forgers and defaulters, and the class of criminals whose ambition to keep pace with the procession prompts to all sorts of dishonesty.

The Chicago Tribune of last Sunday published the story of a man who was out of work, and pleading for a chance to do something to support his family. For twenty-five years he had been in the employ of one firm, in the little city where he lived. He received a good salary, was prominent in society, and a great church worker, enjoying the confidence of all who knew him. He had no bad habits, never speculated, and was not extravagant, but his wants got the best of him, and for years he had been taking small sums of money, until, when he finally came to himself, he found that he owed his employers two thousand dollars. He put a mortgage on his little home, walked into the office one morning with the money, and made his confession.

No prosecution followed, but it was the end of his career, and at fifty he found himself, broken in health, and destitute of hope for the future. This is only one of the many tragedies in daily life, for which imaginary wants are responsible.

There are lots of people in the world who claim to be honest, and who think they are, whose character would not bear very close inspection. They never rob the till, or obtain money under false pretenses, but they don't hesitate to spend other people's money.

The record of business failures published every month, and the cause for which many of them are responsible, indicates very clearly that downright honesty is very lightly regarded.

We will have a keener appreciation of this rare virtue, when the demands of life are confined to its needs rather than its wants.

BRIEF LOCAL NEWS.

Replace Run: Because of the added amount of freight business the Northwestern railroad has started operating the nine o'clock switch engine after the run had been taken off for several days as an experiment. The added amount of transferring and belt line work compelled officials to replace the engine.

Engine Derailed: Spreading rails of the belt line at the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul switch yards near the Hanson factory derailed a switch engine yesterday, causing considerable trouble, as the locomotive had dropped into the ground for a depth of several feet.

PARK ASSOCIATION ELECTS DIRECTORS; FAIR IS PROPOSED

DR. W. A. MUNN NAMED AT ANNUAL MEETING TO SUCCEED JOHN SHERIDAN.

PLAN IMPROVEMENTS

Secretary Putnam Recommends New Stable and Cider Driveway—Boost Stock Show Next Summer.

In addition to the election of the board of directors at the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Janesville Park association, which was held last evening at the city hall assembly room, the matter of a fair or stock show at the park at some date next summer was given considerable discussion. The proposition was brought up by Fred L. Sheldon and was taken over with some enthusiasm, although the final decision will rest with the board of directors.

Of the seven directors elected there is but one new member on the board, Dr. W. A. Munn being named in place of John Sheridan. The other members of the board are John C. Nichols, C. S. Putnam, Frank P. Croak, Edward Amerpohl, Harry Nowlan and John Soulmans.

Secretary C. S. Putnam recommended to the association that a new stable of fifty stalls be erected before the opening of the 1914 training season as better stable accommodations are badly needed at the track. He pointed out that a new barn would be a wise investment which would result in immediate financial returns as there was a much larger demand for stalls at the track last spring than could be supplied. During the race meet last summer it was necessary to provide tents for a large number of horses which was an item of considerable expense amounting to $200 or over for the week.

The other improvement which is badly needed, is a cider driveway from Milwaukee avenue to the race track. The present driveway is in a bad state of repair and while it is good enough for dry weather, a better roadway would be an improvement of the right sort. The association considers the cinders which have been used for the driveway as a material which can be secured at slight cost, the main item of expense being the labor. Action on both recommendations will be taken by the newly elected directors who will name their officers at a meeting to be held soon.

Fair Proposition.
The proposal for a fair to be held at the park next summer is one which has been agitated by several of the stockholders for some time past and has met with wide approval among the merchants and citizens. If a complete agricultural exhibition is not held the association hold a fast stock show, some time during the month of August, perhaps before the various county fairs are held. In this way the show would compete with the Evansville fair or serve to detract from the popularity of the neighboring exhibitions.

The only drawback to the proposal is the fact that there is a lack of stables and buildings for the housing of an exhibit such as Janesville should provide. It is argued that the association could begin in a less pretentious manner, on the other hand, and that in time a monster agricultural fair would be the outcome.

Financial Condition.
The association's financial condition is quite satisfactory, according to the report of the auditing committee. The past season has been a fairly successful one from a revenue standpoint so that it will be possible to spend a considerable sum on the improvements suggested. The directors are making more elaborate plans for another big season in the matter of race meets and speed attractions.

The fact that there were over sixty horses trained during the summer at the Driving Park, which was the first time in its history, is a constant employment, who would not have otherwise been in Janesville, and the fact that the scores of visitors were brought to the city on account of the race meets and activity at the tracks, are indicative of the importance of the park association to the city. It is estimated that it cost some $250 daily for the training of the horses at the driving park stables throughout the season.

These humorous events were short talks, given extemporaneously.

The Laurean have but twenty-one members at present, with nine vacancies open. Owing to the low standing of the new prospective members, the society decided not to have an election for a few, but would wait until the entire nine could enter at once. This election will probably follow the examinations of next week.

BOY OF SEVENTEEN

MEETS NO TROUBLE IN GETTING LIQUOR

William Franklin Arraigned for Drunkenness This Morning—Evidence to City Attorney.

William Franklin, a boy of seventeen years, was arraigned in municipal court this morning charged with drunkenness and his story of securing whiskey and beer at local saloons was told to City Attorney W. H. Dougherty, who was called to the court room by Judge Maxwell when the real seriousness of the case was learned. The city attorney and police officials are gathering further testimony which will be used in prosecution of the two liquor dealers if it is sufficiently conclusive.

Young Franklin was in a particularly bad mood when Judge Maxwell lectured him severely this morning and was on the verge of tears when he promised that the offense would never again be repeated. "I'm through with this sort of thing," declared the almost sobbing, "and I don't want any more booze." The court imposed a fine of $5 and cost of five days in jail, and the boy made arrangements to pay the fine.

Franklin told Judge Maxwell and City Attorney Dougherty that his home was in Sterling, Illinois, but that he had left when his father's treatment of him became unbearable. He stopped at Anselville over two months ago, where on his way to visit relatives near Tomah, Wisconsin, and has been here ever since, securing employment at the farm of Mrs. Howard Welch west of this city. He said he had been in Janesville on several occasions, frequently on Saturday nights, and had had no trouble in getting liquor at different saloons. He had never been drunk before since he had been in Janesville, he assured the court.

He came to town yesterday afternoon and went to a saloon on the east side of the river, where he drank a glass of beer and bought a half pint bottle of whiskey. He also bought a glass of whiskey at a place on the west side of the river, and carried both of the places with a police officer this morning.

Franklin is large for his years but his face is decidedly boyish and his features indicate that he had not reached maturity. It was learned from Mrs. Welch that he had been reliable and industrious and that she had never known that he drank. "He will make a thorough probe of the liquor business in this city," said Dougherty this morning. "There is no violation of the liquor regulations which I consider should be prosecuted more rigorously than the sale of liquor to minors. I want to get conclusive evidence if possible."

BLOWN FROM ROOF HAS BACK BROKEN

Bert Wood of Mt. Zion in Serious Condition Resulting from Coop Blowing Over on Him.

Bert J. Wood, residing near Mt. Zion, a pulmonary condition, suffering from a broken back, was hurt when a chicken coop blew up on him during yesterday's windstorm, pinning him beneath the building. Wood and a helper were stinging the roof of the coop when the wind came and it was nothing short of a miracle that his companion and Mrs. Wood, who was picking up shingles, were not injured.

When the structure started to tip both men jumped. Wood lighting on his hand and knees, the coop crashing full force upon him, while his help or landed on his feet and jumped out of the coop before the falling building. Mr. Wood's condition is pronounced by Dr. J. F. Penner, as being very serious and if death does not result, he is unfortunate man will probably be crippled for life, by someone who he cared for at his home, but who he takes to Mercy hospital as soon as he recovers from the shock sufficiently to make the trip to this city.

NOTICE TO PUBLIC

During the past several weeks a number of fur sets have been brought to us for repairs, after having been out of use by someone else. In some of the cases it was impossible for us to attempt to repair the fur, because they had been ruined by an amateur's attempt to do the work.

We do not take chances on having your costly fur ruined by a someone who knows nothing about fur work. Bring your furs here: we guarantee our work to give absolute satisfaction in every way. Our four business years in Janesville is a good guaranty of our ability as manufacturing furriers and fur repairers.

RETAILERS OF CITY PLAN ORGANIZATION

Branch of State and National Association Will Be Formed in Janesville.

A. Jacobsen and George R. Dolf, organizers for the National and State Retailers and Merchants' Association, are in the city for the purpose of forming a local retailers' society to be affiliated with the national and state orders.

At a meeting of the retailers' branch of the Commercial Club on Friday the proposition was presented and was received most enthusiastically. The object of the organization is the establishment of a reliable credit rating bureau and a closer relation among the merchants, which will result in more economical buying and a better all around understanding of local and outside conditions.

The Janesville merchants are ready to co-operate in this sort of a society, and another meeting will be called shortly to perfect the plan. In the meantime Messrs. Jacobsen and Dolf will remain in the city for the purpose of enrolling new members in the order and to get the movement auspiciously started. It will give an impetus to the Commercial Club, according to Mr. Jacobsen, and will mean many new members. The eight merchants visited yesterday fourteen were enrolled as members who had not been affiliated with the Commercial Club previously.

The state association has branches in some forty or more cities of Wisconsin, where the merchants testify to the many benefits of the plan.

"We feel that this movement is not alone for concrete results and financial benefits, but in our estimation will prove the missing link which strengthen and perpetuate our organization," according to Louis A. Levy, chairman of the local retailers' division of the Commercial Club in an open statement to all retailers of the city.

Heart to Heart Talks

By CHARLES N. LURIE

MAKING OF A CHAMPION.

Maurice E. McLoughlin of California, a young man, is the lawn tennis champion of the United States and one of the best players in the world. His recent playing has aroused the players and followers of the game, many thousands in number, to enthusiasm.

Winning the championship after three months of the hardest lawn tennis that an American ever attempted, McLoughlin proved that his condition was perfect, that he could have undergone greater stress if need were.

The reason? It is found in the statement of a sporting writer that the powers of endurance fought and won for McLoughlin. He "stood up" under the strain. When the time came for the supreme effort he had the stamina to meet the call upon him.

If he had been content with the brilliance of play which is naturally his, if he had relied upon his service and his stroke, his power of outguessing the other fellow, McLoughlin in all probability would not have won the championship. The long strain of the campaigns in England and America would have told, and at the end he would have gone to pieces.

It is stamina that tells in lawn tennis, in baseball, in football, in all the affairs of life.

When athletes wish to praise a man highly they say he "has the stuff" in him. That means he is fit for a long siege if necessary. It means that he does not rely altogether on his brains, his nerve and his knowledge of the game.

It means that he can last. Stamina, "the stuff," does not come to a man naturally. It must be developed. It must be acquired by degrees. It cannot be gained in an hour, a day or a week.

In a sense men and women are all engaged in a sort of championship game. The prizes go most often to those who train faithfully and patiently and wait their time.

True, sometimes the man or woman of genius arises who needs no training. It is the exceptional case. Most of us are not geniuses.

The rest of us, in whatever walk of life we find ourselves or in whatever fields we pursue our ends and ideals, need the sort of stamina that is developed by long preparation, by careful training, by observance of the rules of physical, mental and moral health.

The wisest and most successful athlete is the one who knows the rules and follows them closely. The winner in the game of life likewise follows the rules. They are not numerous. They are simple and easily learned.

But they must be observed if success is to be won.

Always "On the Move."

Paris theaters must close out of season, but the "movies" go merrily on.

Impure Blood

Is unhealthy blood—blood that is not only laden with poisonous and effete matters, but also deficient in red, and white corpuscles. The medicine to take for it is HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

Impure blood shows itself in pimples, boils, and other eruptions, eczema and salt rheum, psoriasis, catarrh, rheumatism, nervousness, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, that tired feeling, and general debility; it exposes you to the danger of contracting infectious and contagious diseases—the grip, typhoid fever, diphtheria, consumption.

Thousands testify that Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies, enriches and revitalizes the blood. If you need a good blood-medicine get Hood's Sarsaparilla, and get it today.

OLD PEOPLE EVERYWHERE SAY

Peruna is good for Coughs, Colds and Catarrhal Diseases.

Mr. J. R. PRINCE.

Mrs. M. A. AVERY.

Mr. HENRY MERZ.

Suffered Forty-five Years.

Mr. J. R. Prince, R. R. 1, Tuckahoe, N. Y., writes: "I am not very well satisfied with the picture that I am sending you, but when the reader looks at this picture if he could only realize that the original suffered for forty-five years, the best of his life, until your kind advice and prescription cured him, he would know from whence these wrinkles came. Next month I shall be sixty-six years old."

Nervous Prostration.

Mrs. Martha Avery, 28 Graham St., Leominster, Mass., writes:

"Four years ago I had nervous prostration. I employed several doctors. I was very much puzzled. I had calary of the stomach and bowels, another nervousness and another enlargement of the liver. My stomach was in a bad shape. There was nothing which seemed to do me much good."

"I tried other remedies, but did not gain any flesh, until I commenced taking your Peruna, which built me right up. I have taken several bottles, but have not taken any now for about six weeks."

"I am seventy-three years old. I never expect to be entirely well or young again, but I am thankful for what Peruna has done for me."

Feels Ten Years Younger.

Mr. Henry Merz, 1624 Upper Mt. Vernon Road, Evansville, Ind., writes: "When I first wrote to you I had bronchial trouble for four years, and had tried several doctors, but they could do me no good. I had pain and rattling in the chest, cough, expectoration, especially at night."

"I took Peruna, and can now say that I am entirely well. I feel ten years younger since I began using Peruna. I recommend Peruna to all my friends, for I was in a bad condition."

"I am an old soldier and am seventy-seven years old."

A good tonic that acts slightly upon the excretory system is advisable for old people. We have a great many testimonials from old people who have been assisted by Peruna. Their old age has been made more useful and beautiful by Peruna so they say. They stand ready to repeat such statements whenever they are asked in the proper way. Everywhere, all over the country, a multitude of old people are to be found who use and praise Peruna.

Those who object to liquid medicines can now procure Peruna Tablets.

DOCTOR'S CONFESSION MAY DECIDE BABY SUBSTITUTION CASE

Top, Dr. W. W. Fraser, Mrs. Dorothy C. Slingsby and the baby in the case. Bottom, Lieutenant Slingsby and Lillian Anderson Certain.

The confession of Dr. W. W. Fraser, chief witness of those attacking the legitimacy of the child said to have been born to Mrs. Dorothy C. Slingsby, and heir to a $1,000,000 estate, that he had received $500 for falsifying the birth certificate, is likely to destroy the case of Lieutenant Slingsby and his wife, who are attempting to prove before the British consul at San Francisco that the child is their own. If the Slingsbys fail to prove that the child is theirs they will lose the income from the $1,000,000 estate.

The story told by Dr. Fraser is that a young unmarried mother, Lillian Anderson, negotiated with him to sell her child; that he arranged to make the sale for $30 to Mrs. Slingsby; that she paid him $500 to falsify the birth certificate.

Up and Doing.

NOT all city folk are as ignorant of the farmers' surroundings as the farmers sometimes suppose. This was evidenced by an incident in the stay of a young New Yorker on a New England farm.

"Well, young man," said the farmer to his city boarder, who was up early and looking round, "been out to hear the haycock crew, I suppose." And the city old chap winked at his hired man.

The city man smiled. "No," said he suavely. "I've merely been out trying a knot in a cord of wood."

WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE.

"But you can't shoot before the season opens." "It makes no difference. I never hit anything, anyway."

Why Papa Lost

Consciousness

"If you marry him," said her papa, who was exhibiting symptoms of violent disposure, "I will not only have to support him, but I will have to pay his debts, too." But the pretty girl and petulant young thing who was hanging to his coat lapels was not moved by the argument.

"Now, papa," she said, "you know well enough that Fred has to live, just the same as other men. And, as to his debts, I've heard you say hundreds of times that a man's debts ought to be paid."

LIFE NO JOKE TO HIM.

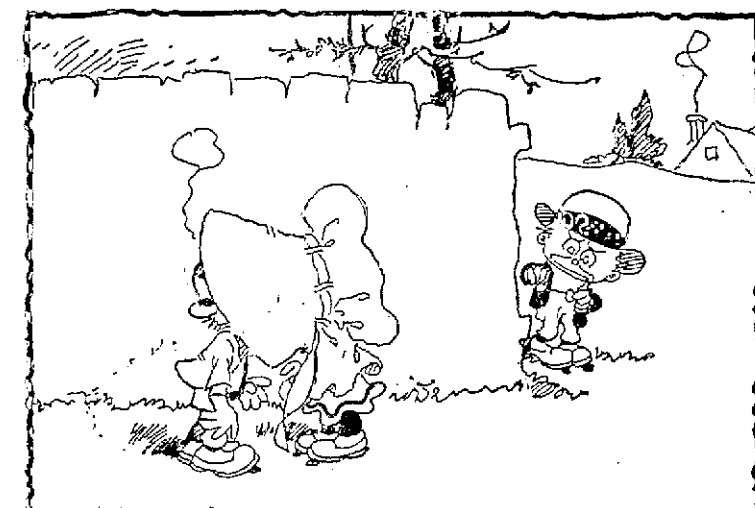

"He certainly is a serious-minded man. What does he do for a living?"

Maude—How pretty Marie looks! She has just put the hooks into old Goldbag for three hundred dollars at bridge. Maude—Yes, she does look winsome!

An Awful Shock

HARPER's wife was out of town on a visit. When Harper opened his mail the other morning he found a neat little check and the following note: "Dear Fred—Inclosed you will find $2.99. Please credit same to my 'conscience fund.' After long hours of deliberation I have reached the conclusion that I paid too much for my loving note. Lovingly, Mae."

THE QUESTION.

The lover: Ah, fickle, fickle woman! Shall I treat her with silent contempt, or shall I treat her with love?

MYSTERIOUS MURDER CASE BEFORE COURT BEGINNING MONDAY

College Professor and Undertaker
Will Face Jury for Murder of Lady Doctor.

[SPECIAL TO THIS GAZETTE.]
Shelbyville, Ind., Nov. 22.—Preparations are being completed for the opening next week of the trial of Dr. William B. Craig, dean of the Indiana Veterinary college, who, together with Alonzo M. Ragsdale, an undertaker, also of Indianapolis, was indicted on December of last year by the Marion county grand jury for the murder of Dr. Helen Knabe, a well known physician and bacteriologist of Indianapolis, who was murdered on Oct. 23, 1911. The case, which was originally to be tried in Marion county last month, was transferred to Shelby county on a change of venue at the request of Dr. Craig, and will be heard before Judge Blair of the Shelby county court. A. M. Ragsdale, indicted jointly with Dr. Craig, did not join in the plea for a change of venue and his case will probably be tried in Indianapolis after the Craig trial is disposed of. Owing to the prominence of the victim and the persons indicted for the murder and because of the mysterious circumstances of the case the trial is attracting country-wide attention and promises to be the most notable murder case ever tried in this county.

Dr. Helen Knabe, the victim of the murder, was about 35 years of age at the time of her death. She was born in Germany, the daughter of a civil engineer, and had come to this country as a young girl to obtain scientific education. She came to Indianapolis, studied medicine and established herself as a general practitioner. Having specialized in bacteriology, she became assistant in the bacteriological laboratory of the state health department, gaining an excellent reputation for her careful and brilliant work. She had her office and living apartment on the ground floor of an apartment house in a quiet part of the city and lived quietly and unostentatiously, devoting nearly all of her spare time to her studies. She had many friends and so far as is known, no enemies, and nobody ever suspected her of having any love affair, although she was a strikingly handsome woman.

On the morning of Oct. 24, 1911, Miss Katherine McPherson, Dr. Knabe's assistant, upon reaching her employer's apartment, found Dr. Knabe dead in her bedroom. Her throat had been severed, but, strange to say, there were no traces of blood upon the bed or the floor of the room and no instrument which might have been used in the murder was found in the room. The body lay upon the bed and was naked except for the nightgown, which was rolled up and upon the floor. The police authorities were informed and after a careful investigation they came to the rather absurd opinion that Dr. Knabe had committed suicide.

The Indiana Council of Women, composed of some of the most prominent women of Indiana, dissatisfied with the conclusions which the police had reached, decided to make a more thorough investigation. They engaged H. C. Webster, a private investigator, who collected the incriminating testimony which formed the basis for the indictment by the grand jury of Dr. Craig and Alonzo M. Ragsdale, an Indianapolis undertaker, who is charged with being an accessory after the fact.

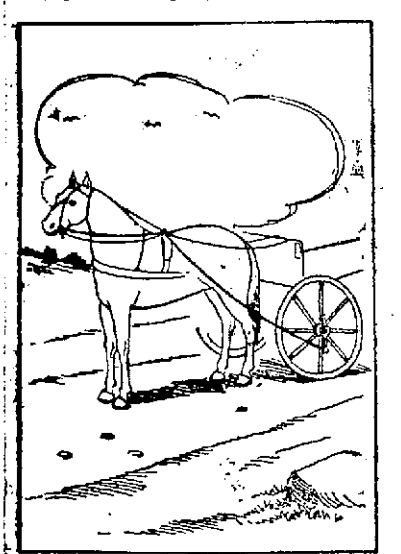

Webster, it is stated, found that Dr. Knabe, who was a lecturer on pathology in the Indiana Veterinary college, of which Dr. Craig has been dean for a number of years, had been an intimate friend of Dr. Craig, who is a widower, a little more than 40 years of age. Dr. Knabe was a frequent visitor to Dr. Craig's home and, as Webster is said to have ascertained, was anxious to become the wife of Dr. Craig. The latter, who has several children from his first marriage, is said to have been opposed to this plan and it is believed that Dr. Knabe visited the house of Dr. Craig under some pretext on the evening before the murder to persuade Dr. Craig to marry her.

The exact nature of the evidence collected by Detective Webster has never been divulged, but it was evidently sufficiently convincing to induce the grand jury to find an indictment against Dr. Craig and Alonzo M. Ragsdale. The arrest of the two men, who were both socially quite prominent, caused a tremendous sensation in Indianapolis at the time. Both were arraigned for a preliminary hearing and released under heavy bail. It is understood that since the finding of the indictment the state has found some additional evidence of important bearing upon the case and it is believed that the trial will bring some extremely startling and sensational disclosures.

WHEEL HOLDS HORSE

Hitching Strap Fastens to Wagon
Instead of Post.

If a man told you he hitched his horse to the wagon you would probably think he was trying to chaff you or that his condition required attention. But an Indiana man has devised a way in which this may be done. A circular band with short arms projecting at opposite sides fits over the hub of one of the wagon wheels. When the horse is to stand the hitching strap, instead of being made fast to tree or post, can be hooked to the lower arm of the band. If the horse starts off the wheel revolves and winds up the slack of the strap, pulling back on it so strongly that unless the animal is very determined about it, it is willing to pull the wagon under these uncomfortable conditions, he will be apt to stop and wait for further orders.

CHAIRMAN OF NEW INDUSTRIAL BOARD

Frank P. Walsh.

Frank P. Walsh of Kansas City is the chairman of the new government commission on industrial relations. The commission has just opened offices in Washington and will immediately proceed with the help of a considerable corps of assistants to investigate the causes that lie behind the present trouble between employers and employees. The aim of the administration is to find out these causes by this investigation and then remove them as far as possible.

QUERY: WHEN WILL LEE BEGIN HIS JOB?

Blair Lee.

Blair Lee, the newly elected U. S. senator from Maryland, is a senator all right, but he doesn't know when he will work at it. He was elected on the Democratic ticket on Nov. 4 by the direct vote of the people to succeed Senator William P. Jackson. Senator Jackson was appointed by the Republican governor to fill out the unexpired term of the late Senator Raynor. This term expires in 1917. This makes a curious legal tangle and was caused by the new law which provides for the direct election of United States senators. The seating of Senator Lee is a matter of great interest to Democrats because of the narrow margin of majority in the senate.

HIS APPOINTMENT MAY UNITE DEMS

Dudley Field Malone.

Dudley Field Malone probably will be named by President Wilson as collector of the port of New York to succeed John Purroy Mitchel. It is believed that the appointment of Malone would help unite the warring Democratic factions in New York city. Malone is identified with the anti-Tammany Democrats, but his father-in-law, Senator O'Gorman, is a Tammany wheelhorse.

Curse of Luxury.
The most judicious historians, the most learned philosophers, and the profoundest politicians, all lay it down as an ascertain indispensable maxim, that wherever luxury prevails, it never fails to destroy the most flourishing states and kingdoms; and the experience of all ages, and all nations, does but too clearly demonstrate the truth of this maxim.—Charles Rollin.

Big Year for Submarines.
At the beginning of this year there were built, building or authorized for the fleets of England, Germany, the United States, France, Japan, Russia, Italy and Austria a total of 341 submarines.

Fads and Fashions

New York, Nov. 22.—Even the most casual observer must become convinced that panniers have returned into favor and will probably remain in favor—for a while at least. Considering the fact that several seasons ago one of the noted designers of Paris made the daring attempt to bring panniers into fashion, but failed, because women did not take kindly to the innovation. For a while, it is true, there was a perfect craze for panniers, but it died out as suddenly as it had developed.

A few months ago another noted designer of fashions in Paris introduced Person styles into fashion. About that time Richepin's "Le Minaret" was produced in Paris, proving an unprecedented success. The costumes of the actresses, designed after the Persian fashion, were copied far and wide and the result of all this was that the Persian "line" became universally popular. From the Persian line to the pannier was but a short step. Although the Persian line is really quite unlike the ordinary pannier in detail, the general outline is very similar. In both cases the upper part of the dress stands away from the hips and accentuates the changing folds of the skirt.

At the present moment the rule in the world of fashion seems to be that pannier effects are correct in the day time and Persian tunic effects in the evening. The arbiters of fashion, and the scientific Persian tunic is unsuitable for day wear.

Some of the newest panniers are in reality formed from two wide gathered flounces, which are attached to the skirt at both sides, giving a sort of quaint balloon appearance to the dress. Another design is arranged in a single flounce gathered at the waist and again gathered half-way between the waist and knee lines. These flounces are always made of very supple materials and they are interlined with fine muslin in order that they may stand away from the hips in the desired manner. For evening wear the exaggerated Persian tunic is immensely popular. It is made of many different materials, but always richly embroidered and invisibly stiffened at the hem.

The alliance of diaphanous fabrics and furs seems to have made a great hit. Almost without exception, the masterpieces created by the most famous designers strongly feature the combination of fur and transparent materials. Evening gowns lend themselves beautifully to this form of decoration, and the housewife has a wide opportunity for the use of fur handings. Frequently skunk, mink, marten and sable fox are used in finger widths to border tunics of sheerest lace, chiffon, tulle or mousseline de soie. The use of dyed fur in tones of yellow, blue, purple and green has met with approval and such dyed furs are often used on handsome models.

The craze for fur trimmings has assured such proportions that it is scarcely surprising that fur has made its appearance upon neckwear. The shops show many styles and designs of dainty neckties in which fur is combined with lace or with some material of delicate texture.

Nut-brown, fawn, suede, chamomile, cinnamon and cuir or leather-brown are among the favorite shades for autumn wear for tailors' suits; also moccasin or golden bronze, a warm, mellow tint bordering somewhat upon chestnut, that looks charming with collar and parements of some brown or gray fur, or even with the russet fox skins all the rage for the moment, although their vogue will probably not last very long.

For afternoon dresses there are numerous improvements over the popular charmouses and drapes de soie of last season. Softly supple and easy to drape, they are, moreover, accompanied by delightful satin brocades to correspond, of which the tunic is sometimes made. In dark blue, vert Russe, mole, an unaggressive corise color, amethyst and a pale gray they are charming, while for those who prefer more strident colors there are purples and crimsons, orange, yellow, citron, absinthe, and "tango," a cross between the shades of fume and tangerine. Brocades and brocatelles and silken gauzes embossed with velvet are one and all the mode of the season, and make exquisite gowns when properly thought out and combined with plain materials.

Lace dresses are popular for ball gowns, and many have scarf draperies of chiffon or charmeuse terminating at the back in immense butterfly wings. Butterflies are poised everywhere on hats, gowns and shoes. One of the handsomest gowns recently displayed by a noted Paris designer was of white beaded tulle over white satin. Bands of mink trimmed the corsage and reddish-brown tulle was used for the skirt, which was arranged to form a butterfly on the front of the corsage.

Sable, skunk and mink edges the bodice overdraperies of bodices on the smallest afternoon frocks. While carefully crumpled or fox in a fashionable trimming for the tunic of black chiffon which appears on many gowns of white satin in brocade or plain design.

A lower at the waist line is a fashion much favored for afternoon wear, and black tulle bows centered with small bunches of brilliants adorn the corsages of many smart evening costumes. Antique buttons and shoe buckles are being searched for by the women of fashion and good taste who prefer one rare old gem to twenty new ones.

The deep girldes adorning afternoon frocks now assume the lines of a vest, and are frequently fastened with jeweled buttons.

A variation of the Napoleonic collar is enjoying great popularity. The collar itself is of lace wired to fit snugly about the back of the neck, and with pointed corners which turn back from the front of the throat. The lace is then extended down the sides of a striped silk waistcoat, to which the collar is attached, and a pleated trim of lace adorns each side. Never has the fight been more popular than now. Many of the fashions are now of such large proportions that they resemble shawls. Sheerest net, embroidered or plain, mouseline de soie, rare lace, batiste, sheer linen are being to make the pretty bits of neckwear.

The favored trimmings for the velvet hat are butterflies, aligrettes, parrots, and what pointed corners which turn back from the front of the throat. The lace is then extended down the sides of a striped silk waistcoat, to which the collar is attached, and a pleated trim of lace adorns each side.

"OTHER WOMAN" IN SOCIETY DIVORCE?

Mrs. John D. Spreckels.

Mrs. John D. Spreckels, Jr., one of the most beautiful young matrons in San Francisco society, has announced her determination to bring suit for an absolute divorce from the oldest scion of the house of Spreckels, member of exclusive clubs, millionaire and man about town.

Mrs. Spreckels is said to have told a friend that she expected her husband to marry another woman after the divorce. Spreckels denies that any other woman is mixed up in the case.

Maintain High Ideals.

The most difficult problem that any human being has to solve is the prevention of an insidious lowering of his standards. It is so easy to grow a little careless about personal appearance, to be a trifle less particular in discerning the difference between right and wrong, to drop into habits of neglect in small matters that were once considered duties, that gradually the whole life has slipped to a lower plane before one is aware. The lowering of ideals along any line means a lowered life.—Great Thoughts.

By GEORGE FITCH, Author of "At Good Old Siwash."

Athens, the capital and principal business city of Greece, is one of the best towns of Rome and investors looking for quick and profitable returns in real estate will do well to look it over.

Athens had 167,479 population in 1907, but the census was notoriously defective and did not include the suburbs. The estimated population, according to the city, telephone and school directors, as well as street car receipts, is now 300,000.

Athens is superbly located for business, being in the center of a rich farming and commercial territory, and having through its seaport, Pella, steamship lines to America, Italy, England and other countries. In 1905 its tonnage as a seaport was greater than that of San Francisco and New Orleans combined. The city already has two railways with trains running regularly to Corinth, Thebes, Sparta and points north, and several new lines have been projected. The Commercial Club of Athens is an active and enthusiastic organization maintaining handsome club rooms and employing a paid secretary to advance the business interests of the town.

Athens offers unsurpassed manufacturing sites at reasonable prices, and its low freight rates are bound to attract large industries. It already has eight cotton mills, forty-five cognac distilleries, fourteen flouring mills, eight soap factories and thirteen shipyards, and could use a steam laundry, a cement block factory and an automobile repair shop to great advantage.

Athens, as capital of Greece, is noted for its handsome and commanding buildings. The parliament house, polytechnic institute, university and royal palace are much admired by visitors. A syndicate has lately been formed to erect a fourteen story office building on Main street, and a new twelve story hotel with Pompeian room and rathskellar is a thing of the near future. Athens must not be confused with the original city of this name, which still lies scattered over the outskirts of the modern town and was built over the hills in such a manner as to make good street car service impossible. The old Athens was founded about 2,500 years ago, and has been a dead one for 1,500 years. Many ruins of the old town are left and create much interest among the peculiar class known as tourists and archeologists who rush through the city, past the botanical garden and other sights of interest and spend all their time taking pictures of the Parthenon, a ruinous old powder magazine which is assessed at $5.50.

A Lady Desires Two Things

FIRST—To look her best.

SECOND—To feel her best—to enjoy perfect health and supreme comfort.

Now, for a lady to look her best, it does not mean that she must lavish great sums on dress. That cannot be so, since many ladies who are recklessly extravagant on dress look dowdy, whilst thousands of ladies of moderate means always look smart and well dressed, no matter what the fashion.

WHAT IS THE SECRET? It is a secret of but four words, which are Newspaper Triviality.

"It is customary to gird at the modern press of Europe and America as sensational, yellow and corrupt, and to represent the captains of industry who control it as panders to base instincts," says War and Peace of London. [SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Nov. 22.—The county boards of Rock, La Crosse, Brown, Outagamie and Dane counties have refused to adopt the mothers' pension law passed by the last legislative assembly according to newspaper reports so far received. Iowa is one of the counties favoring it. This board adopted it unanimously and appropriated money. The Dane county board first rejected it, 28 to 26, and upon a reconsideration of the vote the next day stood by its action by a vote of 33 to 30. The adoption of this law is optional.

Portland, Ore., Nov. 22.—A new law that will place Oregon in the front rank of the states that have adopted measures designed to better the condition of women workers will become operative tomorrow. The law fixes a minimum wage of $9.25 a week for adult women clerks who are not apprentices; defines eight hours and twenty minutes as the maximum day's work and fifty hours as the maximum for a week, and makes 6 p. m. the latest hour at which any woman may be employed on any day of the year in a mercantile establishment. The law automatically eliminates Saturday-night shopping and Christmas holiday night shopping in such establishments.

CONTEST A PORTION OF INCOME TAX LAW

Argue Validity of Section Taxing Earnings on Business Done Outside of State.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Nov. 22.—The validity of that portion of the state income tax law which taxes earnings of corporations from business done outside the state was attacked in the supreme court today by the Montreal Mining Company, a Milwaukee corporation, in a suit brought against the state.
The company paid a portion of the tax assessed for its 1911 income, but did so under protest, claiming it to be unlawful, and brought this action to recover. The state demurred to the complaint on the ground that the circuit court had no jurisdiction of the defendant state of Wisconsin. The circuit court sustained the demurrer, and the company brought this appeal. Deputy Attorney General Walter Drew appeared for the state, and asked that the demurrer be sustained.

The only question raised on the appeal was whether a corporation which paid an income tax to the local treasurer of a town, city or village in which it may be situated can maintain an action against the state to recover the amount. The state contended there is a broad difference between an action to recover back an illegal tax and a review of the assessment made by the tax commission or other assessing body.

"There is no reason why an action against the state to recover an illegal income tax should be given to an income tax payer because he does not pay his tax into the state treasury," said the attorney general. "Therefore it imports neither with justice nor common sense to require the state to disgorge moneys paid into the various local treasuries of the state."

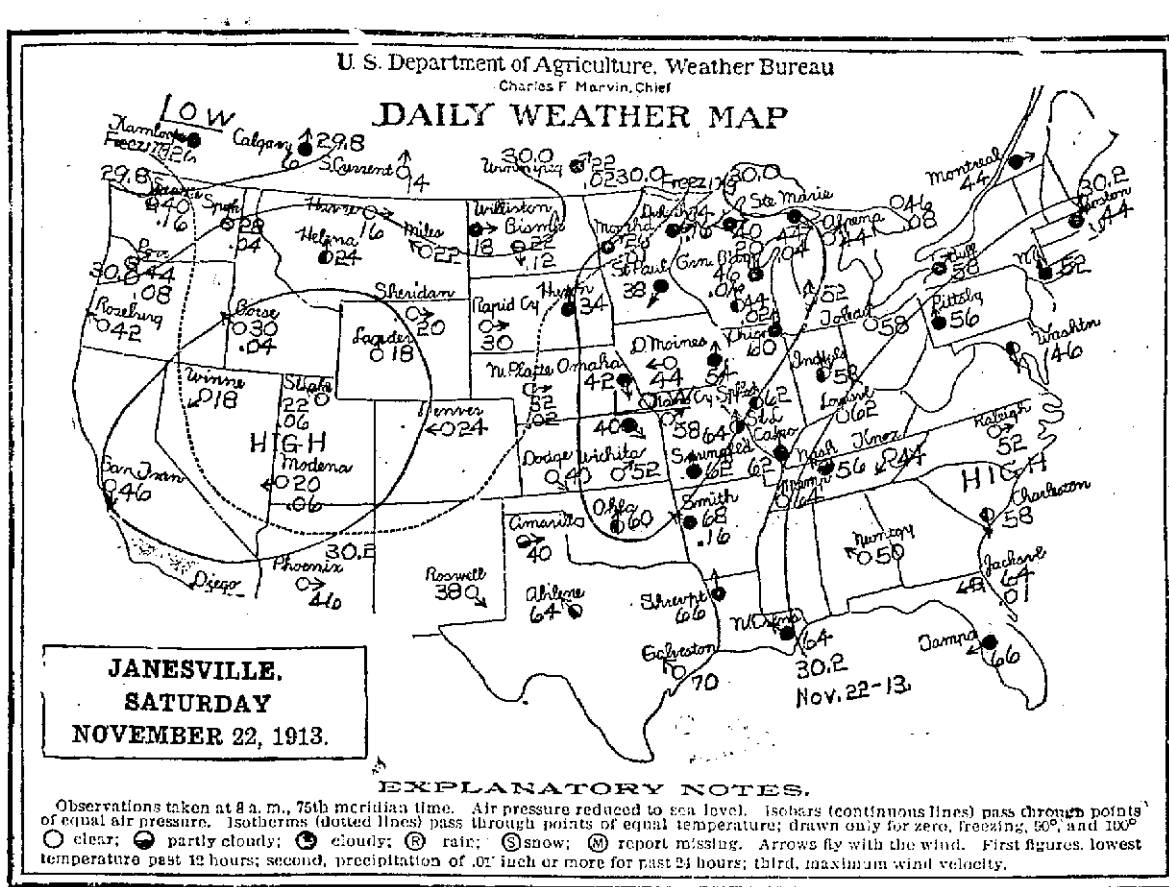

LINK OLD AND NEW WEST AT TEXAS BREEDERS FAIR

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Fort Worth, Texas, Nov. 22.—Linking modern Texas to the old cattle days is the eighteenth annual National Feeders and Breeders' Show which opened here today. Herds of cattle are being driven through the streets with the same abandon as a generation ago. Big spurs are clanking through marble-paved hotel lobbies. Chaparrals are back in the best society. For a week Fort Worth is to be the typical frontier cow town, with its dust and its ever present bovine odor.

Proceeding the opening of the show this afternoon there was a civic parade through the business section to the stockyards. The parade was followed by the formal opening exercises at the Coliseum. Governor Colquitt delivered the principal address. The show this year is the largest in the history of the organization. At the stockyards for the event are thousands of thoroughbred cattle, pedigreed sheep, fine horses and fancy hogs. The annual show of the Fort Worth Poultry and Pigeon Association, which is being held in conjunction with the stock show, adds to the aggregation several thousand choice specimens of poultry and pigeons.

WILSON WEDDING CAKE VERY MODEST AFFAIR

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, Nov. 22.—Anyone supposing the White House will resemble a bake shop during the next few days will be disappointed. It became known today that Miss Jessie Wilson's wedding cake will be a very modest affair.
A number of letters pouring into the executive offices asking for a piece of it, indicate a widespread impression that it will be an extravagant creation. To comply with the request White House officials would have to get 100 cakes.
Two big express trucks rolled up to the White House today, loaded with large boxes of presents, mostly cut glass and "handle with care" articles.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.
November 22, 1913.—The storm that was over Wisconsin yesterday has turned northeastward and is now beyond the field of the weather map. A secondary depression developed in connection with it on the southern plains. This disturbance is now in the lower Mississippi valley and is attended by rain in Iowa, Wisconsin and throughout the Missouri Valley. Another area of low barometer has made its appearance in the Canadian northwest, while high atmospheric pressures prevail in the plateau region. These conditions promise no change to severe weather in the immediate future. The barometer is high on the south Atlantic coast, with generally fair weather throughout the east.

AMERICAN GOWN FOR WHITE HOUSE BRIDE

Miss Jessie Wilson Shows Loyalty to Country by Having Costume Purely American.

Cincinnati, Nov. 22.—News that Miss Jessie Wilson will be married in a costume of purely American production, both as to workmanship and material, so pleased members of the Cincinnati chamber of commerce that the following telegram was sent her by the home products committee: "We congratulate you upon your loyalty to your country in ordering your trousseau entirely of American manufacture. Your patriotism is a good omen and will do much to further the cause of more patronage of home industry by our people. All good wishes for your happiness."

Awarded "First Position" at the World's Greatest Automobile Show

The extraordinary supremacy of the 1914 Overland has been officially recognized by the American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association.

This organization has awarded the Willys-Overland Company the position of honor at the great National 1914 Automobile Show which opens in Grand Central Palace, New York City on January 3d.

Do you know that the people of over 50 nations are wiring, writing and cabling to Toledo for Overlands?

Do you know that in response to their repeated requests and urgent demands we are shipping from 50 to 60 earloads a day—which means 200 automobiles every day in the week?

Do you know that the 1914 Overland is today the most sought after car of its type in the entire civilized world?

Even in Detroit, the automobile hub of the world, there are more Overlands being sold than any other car of this type.

The Overland has made, established and won for Toledo WITH ITS INDIVIDUAL PLANTS ALONE, the title of the second greatest automobile city in the world.

Detroit, alone, leads and yet the 1914 Overland is outselling, even in Detroit, every competing car.

The Overland factories average 50 shipments to the average maker's one. The Overland factories will build 50,000 cars for 1914. This is more cars than all the factories of France; three times as many as all the factories of Germany and far more than the combined factories of Italy, Holland, Russia and Sweden.

Has it ever occurred to you that there must be some substantial reason for such unparalleled success? There is, and here it is.

NO OTHER FACTORY IN THE WORLD CAN BUILD A CAR THE EQUAL OF THE 1914 OVERLAND FOR LESS THAN $1200.

Our price—$950.

That's the reason and the answer.

Now here are the facts.

The 1914 value is INCREASED but the 1914 price is DECREASED!

The motor is LARGER—but the price is LOW-ER.

The wheelbase is LONGER—but the price is SHORTER.

The tires are LARGER—but the price is LOW-ER.

The new car has ELECTRIC LIGHTS THROUGHOUT—even under the dash—but the price is LOWER.

It is magnificently finished in dark Brewster green, with running boards and wheels to match, trimmed in polished nickel and aluminum—but the price is LOWER.

Then there is a larger tonneau, a jeweled Stewart Speedometer—a larger steering wheel, and deeper upholstery—but the price is LOWER.

Here you have the world's record automobile value—at a record breaking price.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

EVERY human being's life is both subjective and objective. That is, it consists of the things and people and conditions that surround him plus his reaction upon these things, people and conditions.

We all know that. But do we realize that the individual reaction is more important than these external conditions?

Two people may live in the same house, read the same books, look at the same pictures and furniture, hold converse with the same neighbors, and yet live totally different lives, because their individual reaction on these identical conditions is so entirely different.

Two people walking down the street together will not see the same things. One will see houses and types of architecture, another the babies in the perambulators, another the gowns of the women, etc., etc., according to their tastes and interests. But to go still further than that, two people may look at exactly the same thing and see something entirely different.

Once upon a time I spent a summer in a cottage built near a bit of beach where the waves thundered in and broke in magnificent surf. We had many visitors and of course we took them all down to see this sight. And they all saw or heard something different.

The engineer watched for a few minutes in silence and then he broke out, "What gets me is the wasted energy! Why first look at the way those waves thundered in. I'd like to know how many foot-pounds of energy there are in every wave. Think of the work they would do if we could only harness them."

The athlete immediately wanted to know if anyone swam on that strip of beach. "If there isn't too much of an undertow," I'll try it tomorrow," he decided.

And so it went. To each visitor that little strip of sandy beach, with the waves rolling in, meant something entirely different. The teacher was always the same but the reaction was always different. And so it is all through life. The subjective dominates and moulds the objective, and it isn't the things or the people or the conditions about us that matter, so much as our own reaction upon them.

"Those waves must be three or four feet high, but I swam in higher surf than that last summer."

"I don't care so much about watching them," said one of my women visitors, "but I could sit for hours and listen to that dull boom they make."

On the other hand, my artistic friend disliked the noise of the waves, but was delighted by the beauty of the scene and raved about the wonderful picture this view or that would make.

A practical and cautious visitor scarcely conceded a glance to the magnificent surf, before he turned his back on it to look up at the cliff behind us and wonder how the cottagers dared build so close to the edge. "Look at the way the surf is eating away that cliff!" he exclaimed. "Ten years from now they'll have to move their houses back."

THE KITCHEN CABINET

WOULD you throw away a diamond because it pricked you? One good friend is not to be weighed against the jewels of all the earth. If there is unkindness between us, let us come face to face and have it out. Quick before love grows cold.—Robert Smith.

ECONOMICAL DISHES.

Meats which are not tender enough to serve as steaks, chops or roasts are as nutritious as those which cost more money per pound. All tough meat should be cooked long and slowly at a low temperature.

Grillades.—Chop a medium sized onion fine, dredge it with flour and fry in hot bacon fat until brown. Add two pounds of round steak, cut in small pieces. Season well with salt and paprika; add a cup of canned tomatoes free from juice and water sufficient to cover. Cook on the back part of the range, well covered, for two hours.

German Meat Balls.—Trim all the fat and skin from a pound of round steak, put over the fire with a quart of cold water, one onion, a stalk of celery, a tablespoonful of parsley and a teaspoonful of salt. Cook one hour. Soak a large slice of bread in water, squeeze until dry, then mix one pound of the round steak minced fine; add a beaten egg and two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, one teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper. Make into balls as large as an egg and boil ten minutes in the broth. Brown a tablespoonful of flour in a tablespoonful of butter, strain the broth and add it, stirring until thick. Pour the gravy over the meat balls and serve.

Meat Loaf.—To each pound of chopped beef add two ounces of fat pork or suet; mix with a fourth of a cup of bread crumbs, one teaspoonful of salt, seasonings of herbs and a beaten egg. A few drops of vinegar or lemon juice softens the meat fiber and makes it more digestible. This loaf may be steamed one or two hours or put into the oven and baked, basting occasionally. Any of the loaf left over may be dipped in egg and crumbs, fried and served as croquettes.

Baked Bread and Cheese.—Slice stale bread half an inch thick and lay in a pudding dish with alternate layers of cheese and a little salt. When the dish is full and the cheese is on top, pour in milk slowly until the bread is nearly covered. Cover and bake half an hour; uncover and brown. The bread will puff up and look as good as it tastes.

Dog For Golf Links.

A golf dog has been discovered. The animal, a rough-haired terrier, is quite self-supporting, and he helps to support the house painter and his family with whom he lives. It has roamed out as many as ten good golf balls on a Sunday night, and in one week brought home 22.—Manchester Guardian.

GRAND JURY HALTS IN SLINGSBY PROBE; PERJURY CHARGES MAY BE WITHDRAWN

Mrs. Charles Slingsby.

The grand jury probe into the "baby substitution case" in San Francisco has been postponed. An indictment for perjury was sought against Mrs. Charles Slingsby, who was charged with having substituted another baby for her own stillborn child and then swearing in the birth certificate that the child was hers. The case is now before the British vice consulate in San Francisco. If this tribunal finds Mrs. Slingsby guilty the Slingsbys will lose the income of a $1,000,000 estate in England. The grand jury probe may then be resumed.

Household Hint

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

Try dipping your pork chops and pork tenderloins in flour before frying them, and see how delicious they are. When blacking the stove mix the black with turpentine. The polish will shine more brightly and last better.

Pieces of soft wood soaked in cedar oil, dried and laid in drawers of an ordinary chest, closet or the most costly cedar chest, and costs but little trouble.

Boiled hominy or rice should be substituted for potatoes sometimes if you wish to preserve the good health of your family.

THE TABLE.

Banana Croquettes.—Remove the skins from the bananas, scrape using a silver knife to remove the string principle which lies close to the skin, and cut in halves crosswise; then remove a slice from each end. Dip in crumbs, egg and crumbs again, fry in deep fat, and drain on brown paper.

Russian Patties.—One pint of oysters, three tablespoonfuls of butter, four and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour, one-half cup of chicken stock, one-half cup of cream, one-half tablespoonful of vinegar, three-fourth tablespoonful of lemon juice, yolk of two eggs, one tablespoonful of grated horseradish, two tablespoonfuls of capers, salt and pepper. Marry the oysters, drain, and reserve the liquor; there should be one-half cup. Make sauce of butter, flour, stock, oyster liquor and cream; add the yolks of eggs, seasoning, and salt and pepper to taste. Add the oysters, and as soon as oysters are heated, fill patty shells.

Patty Shells.—Roll puff paste one-quarter inch thick, shape with a patty cutter, first dipped in flour; remove centres from one-half the rounds with a smaller cutter. Brush over with cold water, the larger pieces near the edge, and fit on tines, pressing lightly. Place in a towel between pans of crushed ice, and chill until paste is stiff; if cold weather chill out of doors. Place on iron or tin sheet covered with bluing paper; and bake twenty-five minutes in a hot oven. The shells should rise their full height and begin to brown in twelve to fifteen minutes; continue browning and finish baking in twenty-five minutes. Press out from centre of rings of patties may be baked and used for patty covers; or put together, rolled, and cut for unders. Trimmings from puff paste should be carefully laid on top of each other, patted and rolled out.

Chocolate Sponge.—One-half cup of butter, one-fourth of prepared powdered cocoa, three eggs, one cup of sugar, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoonful of cloves, one-half cup of cold water, one cup of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder.

Cream butter; add the cocoa, yolks of eggs well beaten, sugar mixed with cinnamon and cloves, and water. Beat the whites of eggs, and add to the first mixture alternately with flour mixed and sifted with baking powder. Bake in small tins from fifteen to twenty minutes.

English Monkey for the Chafing Dish.—One cup of stale bread crumbs, one cup of milk, one tablespoonful of butter, one-half cup of soft mild cheese, cut in small pieces. One egg, one-half teaspoonful of salt, few grains of cayenne.

Soak the bread crumbs fifteen minutes in milk, melt the butter, add the cheese, and when the cheese has melted, add the soaked crumbs, egg slightly beaten, and the seasonings. Cook three minutes, and pour over toasted crackers which have been spread sparingly with butter.

Every Day Talks for Every Day People

BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.

Do you bake your own bread? If you do, have you a bread mixer? If you haven't you don't half know how easy it is to make good bread with very little work, as one of these simple inexpensive machines can eliminate a lot of the old time work and worry.

If you have won, when you put in all the necessary ingredients prior to turning it for the prescribed time, just add a cupful of raisins that you have soaked in cold water since you got a little cinnamon or nutmeg and a cup of sugar. This won't make cake of your bread, but it will make delicious bread that will disappear so quickly that—watching the children and John doing justice to it—you'll rise several notches in your own estimation.

This, however, won't be determined to your eternal satisfaction. You have a right to be pleased and proud at doing things that will make your home and family even a wee bit better—happier.

So put up and be proud about your home cooking and let the baker tool his horn outside. You are doing much for every member of your family when you give them home cooking. It's all very fine to say the baker's stuff is just as cheap. Probably it is. In fact, a woman who is rather good at figures tells us that to make six pounds of bread at home—not counting the fuel and the time—costs 24 cents. The same amount can be purchased for 23 cents at the baker's. That gives the baker the palm if economy be the only side you look at this question from. But is it?

Is it the best plan to feed bakers' food to growing children day after day? And how about John? Truthfully he can shake his head and say, "It's not like what mother used to make."

Home-grown cooking is on the declining side? But the home that still has its cookie and friedcake jar—lead me to them. And when it comes to pie? Can the baker's pie stand up beside the flaky home-made one and dare to lay claim to any honors? You answer!

Planning rightly, you can make bread—six loaves—a batch of fried-cakes on the top of the range while the bread is in the oven. Then, as soon as the bread is baked, a batch of cookies. This isn't time-taking work; that is, you need not be long in doing it. Have everything ready before starting. That's a genuine aid in rapid work. If you have a kitchen cabinet this is not difficult to do, and if you haven't one, why not get John to make you one.

A kitchen table that sells for $4.50 with drawers for flour, sugar, and two small drawers for cooking utensils, can be purchased, and for 50 cents enough lumber to make a cupboard that will fit just above it. It remains for you to say how simple or how much partitioned this cupboard shall be. It will hold all the things necessary to bake with, so that you need not walk across the floor from table to cupboard while baking. Tack white oilcloth on the top of the table first (some prefer a sheet of tin), and varnish or paint the cupboard above it, and for $5 and a little of John's time and work you have a kitchen cabinet that will rank favorably with the best of them. Thus equipped you'll want to bake. Remember what Jane Addams says about home cooking; about bread making. The most of us have a great deal of respect for Miss Addams. She forces it! Would it be a poor decision to come to, that we will do more home cooking? Make the range fire do more than simply heat the kitchen—make it bake.

America's Blue Ribbon CHAMPIONS

ONCE more the fashionables of the New World are busy with modistes and milliners of this country and Paris and the tailors of London, all working feverishly to complete wardrobes which are to pass in review at the approaching Horse Show, that annual fixture in New York's calendar which marks the return of these same fashionables to their city residences after months spent at resorts the world over, or else at their adjacent country estates.

To many, these fashionables, their gowns, and horse show togery are the whole show, but the writer is far more interested in the horses that will be shown there, and he shall confine his comments to them. That the very best horses in the world will be gathered in New York within the next few days none can gainsay, for nowadays the show horse has reached such a stage of perfection, and such vast fortunes have been expended in bringing him up to his high stage of perfection that a champion of champions is in reality worth his weight in silver.

Beauty of the Harness Class.

For many years the harness classes eclipsed all others at the big horse shows. Even today they are by far the showiest classes to cavort about the ring and nothing could be more beautiful in horseflesh than the perfectly matched pairs that prance to whatever style of vehicle they might be attached. Driven in spans or tandems, or singly, or in fours, these harness horses represent all that is best in the horses of today. But with the almost universal adoption of the automobile as Society's mode of locomotion, whether it be for an airing in the park or a drive through town or country, the harness horse stands in peril of desertion. Of course there are those real lovers of horses who, no matter how many automobiles they may own, will always maintain a stable of show horses. Then, too, there are certain men and women of this country with social aspirations, but whose only claim for recognition is a fat bank account, who recognize the show horse as an easy passport to the drawing rooms of the chosen few.

Intense Interest in Saddle Horses.

This year all interest centres in the saddle class. There will be more high grade saddle horses, hunters and chasers shown at the coming horse show than ever before. Many of these have come from across the seas and the best chasers of the German, Austrian, French, English and Italian armies will be shown with their officer owners. This constitutes one of the classiest events in the annual horse show and one in which more real rivalry is injected than any other. These foreign officers who come here to compete with those of Uncle Sam always wear their full cavalry or artillery regalia when they show their horses and these dazzling uniforms of the hussars and lancers lend a vivid splash of color to the already brilliant spectacle. So far the foreigners have walked away with the ribbons which the officers of the United States Army so valiantly strove for, but this year there will be another sequel to the struggle.

One of the most spectacular performers ever to enter the lists for ribbons throughout the horse show circuit, open air and under roof, is Nickel Plate, the magnificent, big, steel gray gelding Miss Althea has so successfully shown the last year. Nickel Plate is the undisputed champion of his class, and although many noble looking challengers will be in the arena this autumn, real experts of horse flesh assert that he will repeat his successes of the past. This horse rarely fails to capture every ribbon he competes for and should he by some triviality fail to land the blue in this or that class he invariably comes back and wins the challenge cup and ribbon for the championship. His owner always rides him in his various classes and she shows him in faultless style.

Sixteen Year Old Marvel.

Another blue ribbon champion is Cavalier, the splendid big hunter and steeplechaser which little Miss Hitchcock is so successfully showing this year. This girl, barely sixteen, is one of the most sensational riders in the exclusive Meadowbrook, Long Island, set where horses are the ruling passion. She is as expert in the hunting field as she is in the show ring, and this year has taken up steeplechasing with such success that there are few men who can hold their own with her. She also is a splendid polo player, and there are few better. Miss Hitchcock will show her own mounts as well as those of her mother, Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, at the Horse Show and since she has shown a dozen or more hunters over the jumps in a single afternoon at several open air shows it is not reasonable to suppose that there will be any woman contender against her who possesses more skill, or stamina.

Unusual interest centres about the performance of "Champ Clark," another champion of champions, who will be shown this fall by his owner, Mrs. Charles M. Allaire. This horse is a splendid performer in the show ring and never fails to bring home a ribbon, and more often a blue, when he competes. His owner and rider is a finished horsewoman and she knows how to bring out every good point he possesses.

Mrs. Davis, whose husband always shows a number of hunters, is a highly accomplished horsewoman, and whenever her husband's horses are entered in classes where women must ride she invariably puts them through their paces or over the jumps.

The Four-In-Hand Champions.

Of course chief interest surrounds the various four-in-hand classes, whether these beautiful coaches be tooled by men or women whips. Mr. Alfred G. Vanderbilt, president of the National Horse Show Association, has, perhaps, done more to keep interest alive in this beautiful sport here and abroad than any other individual. For instance, each year he tools a coach from London to Brighton and makes the return trip on alternate days. To do this he has to maintain a stable of upwards of seventy horses, stationed at various points along the road. Fresh relays of coaching horses are made at frequent intervals so that the high rate of speed he has set for the trip can be maintained. Such a sport costs thousands upon thousands of dollars each year, but his interest in it seems to be on the increase rather than waning. Mr. Vanderbilt will, of course, show his several coaching fours at the forthcoming show and among them will be his championship spans of grays.

Judge William Moore is another devotee of the show ring whose tastes run to the harness horses and his entries possibly exceed in number, as well as in quality, those of any other contestant. He has gathered in his stable one of the grandest collections of show horses this country has ever seen, and it is only necessary for a horse in this or any other country to show championship calibre before Judge Moore has annexed it. His fours are second to none in the world and the annual duel between him and Mr. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt for the coaching marathon, from Arrowhead Inn to the show ring in Madison Square Garden while the show is in progress, is one of the most stirring events of this function. Judge Moore is a fine whip and none can show his horses to better advantage than he.

Women Ardent Devotees of Sport.

The women who still keep up their interest in the harness classes are numerous and this year, as heretofore, these classes will be well filled with women as competitors. Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt, as well as Mrs. Edward McLean, of Washington, are liberal contributors in the way of entering world championship horses and both are fine whips. Mrs. McLean's husband is practically a newcomer to the horse show set, but he has spent no end of money in securing the world for horses of championship calibre, and he has a string now second to none. Mr. Reginald C. Vanderbilt, however, is an old-time exhibitor, and for many years he has been breeding the finest horses this country can produce at his Sandy Point Farm, near Newport, R. I. His wife and little daughter frequently show his harness horses in the ladies' classes. Like his brother, Mr. Alfred Vanderbilt, he manifests little interest in the saddle horse, and never has exhibited one. Mr. McLean, on the other hand, is procuring saddlers as well as harness horses, and only recently sent a commissioner to Ireland to pick up the very best hunters that could be found in that country, where nearly all good hunters come from.

Another contestant doubtless will be Miss Harriet Alexander, who is one of the most accomplished drivers of fours in this country. She, together with Mrs. Thomas Hastings, Miss Marion Hollins and Miss Carol Hartman, the latter the daughter of the late Edward H. Harriman, and the only woman "master of fox hounds" in this country, are prime movers in the Women's Four-In-Hand Club which makes long distance runs from the Colony Club, New York, to far distant resorts at frequent intervals each season. Invariably some woman feels the coach during these runs, which have become an institution now in the women's sporting world.

NEWS AND COMMENT ON WEEK'S EVENTS IN MERRY ENGLAND

Fashions, Literature, Woman's Suffrage and Navy Situation Discussed in Weekly Cable Review.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Nov. 22.—Lord Lansdale, England's sporting earl, the man who sets the fashion for the regular patrons of the race courses and other places where sportsmen gather, and whose dress is one of the attractions to visitors at the Olympic Horse Show and other such occasions, has caught a cold in this autumn.

At Newmarket the other day he wrote what a writer of fashion truly described as "piquant." Here is a description of the earl's attire. "He wore a chocolate brown suit with stripes of a darker color. The morning coat was full skirted but saucy with a large flap pocket on either side and two large buttons at the back. His black bowler was slightly cant; his uncovered tie of red, white and yellow; his waistcoat was white with yellow stripes, and was peculiarly long; his trousers were rather wide and turned up at the bottom, showing his socks over patent leather shoes. His clear was medium sized and worn without a band."

The West End tailors were ready with the chocolate brown suit, which are all the fashion this season, but the colored waistcoat and the tie have not yet been copied.

Woman Solicits Votes.

The women's political party, of which the Duchess of Marlborough is the organizer and moving spirit, has been taking a prominent part in an election for a member from Church Ward to the Battersea Borough Council, and the Duchess herself has been canvassing and working for her candidate, a Mrs. Cassidy. Church Ward is a work class constituency and the appearance of the Duchess in the mean streets of the ward and at the cottage doors of the workmen voters on behalf of Mrs. Cassidy, has been quite an event in the district. Mrs. Cassidy has been a poor law guardian for Battersea for ten years and a school teacher for twenty-nine years and now the women's political party and the Duchess of Marlborough have set themselves the task of electing her to the Borough Council. They will do the same in all municipal elections of the future in which women candidates are concerned. The party is a "non-party" organization, it supports neither conservative, liberal, socialist, suffragist nor non-suffragist; it is simply a women's party with the watchword: "Reform—Progress." They take no part, except to vote, in the canvassing, committee, agents and poll clerks being women. This is not the first time that the Duchess has made acquaintance with the poorer districts of London. She has been carrying on for some time in Whitechapel and elsewhere, a work on behalf of the wives and children of criminals, who have been looked after at homes established by her during the incarceration of the bread winner of the family. FAIL TO CHECK USE ZEPPELIN AIRSHIPS

Population of Berlin Decreasing. Inhabitants Moving into Country.—Hunting Field Found.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Berlin, Nov. 22.—The two disasters to Zeppelin airships in Scotland and America are not to be regarded as checking the use of these craft in Germany. This is the decision apparently reached by the government, the concerns that build airships, and by what may be called the aerial traveling public. The recent fatal accidents in the North Sea when fourteen men were killed, and at Jellandsholm, when twenty-eight persons lost their lives, have not reduced the number of sailings in the vicinity of Berlin of the Hansa, stationed at Potsdam. This airship is still making two trips daily, and only recently it celebrated its three hundredth flight. Moreover, the German Airship Navigation Company, which owns the Hansa and two other airships, is preparing for a much more extended schedule of sailings. To the company's eight stations, located at Potsdam, Hamburg, Danzberg, Frankfurt, Baden-Baden, Gotha, Leipzig and Friedrichshagen, are to be added still more—Kiel, Bremen, Hannover, Brunswick, Dresden, Stuttgart, Munich and Copenhagen. It is also intended later to establish stations at towns in the more eastern part of the empire, such as Breslau, and probably at Danzig and Konigsberg.

From a recent issue of the "deutsches time table" it appears that regular air routes and fixed sailings will be maintained between Friedrichshagen and Copenhagen; the airships will sail either via Hamburg and Brunswick, or by way of Brunswick, Potsdam, Leipzig, Gotha and Stuttgart. Another line will connect Dresden and Hamburg by way of Potsdam and Brunswick. Vessels travelling between Bremen and Emden will follow the same course as far as Brunswick. Between Dresden and Dresden the route will also be by way of Brunswick. The last named city is thus to be a sort of central station for the whole system. Owing to the large number of stations that eventually will be opened, it is expected that the aircraft will be able to find ready refuge when surprised by bad weather. Most of the stations are constructed to accommodate two ships.

Loss in Population.

The population of Berlin is decreasing. Not only are the laboring classes moving out to the country to find work but the wealthy are forsaking the city for more pretentious homes in the nearby suburbs. The exodus has been so steady during the last eight months that Berlin today has over 41,000 less inhabitants than it had on March 1. The present year is the only one to show a decrease in population since 1873. For six years past the rate of increase has been comparatively slow, but as recently as 1906 there was a gain of 51,000 in twelve months. Now the tide has turned the other way, and the municipality is alarmed over the departure of nineteen millionaires in the German sense in the three months ending June 30. The city's tax receipts are correspondingly reduced.

FOUND THE COUNTRY HE DESCRIBES.

After being out of touch with civilization for many weeks, Mr. White sent a messenger with letters to Victoria Nyanza. He writes that the new field, where the sound of rifle never has been heard, is as big as the hunting grounds of British East Africa, and that there are in it thousands upon thousands of head of game of all sorts. In Wildlife, which are found in big herds, stand at a hundred yards distance to watch the party pass, and other animals, many of them of rare species, are so tame that the hunter can walk up to them in plain sight. The country is composed of low hills reaching down to the open plain; the climate is good and Mr. White assures that the region is so long unsurveyed because of the difficulties of getting in touch with the outside world. Everybody in the party was well at the time of writing and Mr. White expected to finish his trip about December 1, coming out via Lake Victoria Nyanza.

The loss this year appears to be not wholly due to the movement of the people to suburban towns, for some prosperous neighbors, as Charlottenburg and Schöneberg, also show small losses, and the gains in other adjacent municipalities are not large enough to account for the removal from the capital. The demand for labor in Greater Berlin this year has been very slack, and in spite of the continuation to fields where work can be secured, the number of the unemployed is assuming alarming proportions. Even the building trades, which normally employ thirty thousand, report very limited activity.

Returns from Russia.

W. W. Husband, an agent of the United States department of commerce and labor, has just returned to Berlin after an 8,000-mile tour through the interior of Russia, investigating the conditions of Russian emigration to the United States on the spot. This work of Mr. Husband's impresses the attention paid by the department to questions of this nature. Emigration of the orthodox Russians, by distinction from the Russian Jews who have for years made up so large a portion of the stream of immigrants to the United States, began only recently and the department, it is understood, has been endeavoring to discover the conditions which were leading them to seek the United States, whether they were being induced to do so against the provisions of the law on emigration, and whether they would probably form permanent elements of the American population. It is understood that on the first point a satisfactory answer was received. It would appear, however, that these Russian emigrants are like many of the Italians, so to the United States only with the intention of remaining long enough to board a little fortune which will enable them to return and live in comfort in their home country.

Mr. Husband was accompanied on his trip by Samuel Harper, son of the late president of the University of Chicago, an interpreter. He is now starting for the Balkans on a similar trip of investigation, and hopes that Russian emigrants have now been sufficiently settled after the years, to enable him to get the information desired by the department. Virgin Hunting Field. A new hunting field of vast area, still untouched by the rifle of the white sportsman, has been found in East Africa by Stewart Edward White, the American author. In a letter written to a friend in Berlin, Mr. White calls this territory "probably the very last big virgin hunting country in the world." Mr. White accompanied by his wife, first went to Africa shortly after Colonel Theodore Roosevelt visited the country four years ago. He was so delighted with his experiences that he returned recently with a new expedition to travel into more remote regions. He obtained permission from the German government to hunt in the German territories, and here

WOMAN ESCAPES OPERATION

By Timely Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Here is her own statement.

Cary, Maine.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and was fat and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your medicine."—Mrs. HAYWARD SOWERS, Cary, Maine.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (Confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

"Wasn't it a good race? Didn't they go deliciously?" she threw at him. And then, "We will go around by the Belmonts Road; it is only three miles farther, and it is early in the afternoon. There is nothing to be afraid of. I must not, Alice. I am going to the farm tonight."

"To the farm?" Alice looked at him in surprise. "But you were not to go till tomorrow. My father and I will ride over with you. Have you forgotten?"

"No," said Francois, "I have not forgotten. Indeed, that I am going away tomorrow, Alice. I turned sharply, and her deep blue glance searched his eyes. 'What do you mean, Francois?' And then, imperiously, 'Don't tease me, Francois. I don't like it.'"

Francois steadily hardened his face very carefully, and answered: "I am not teasing you, Alice. I did not tell you before because—'he stopped, for his voice was going to break. 'Cause I thought we would have our ride just as usual today. I only knew about it myself this morning. I am going to Pietro.'"

"Going to Pietro?" Alice was gasping painfully. "Francois—it is a joke—tell me it is a poor joke. Quick!" she ordered. "I won't have you play with me, torture me."

"It is not a joke." The boy's eyes were held by a supernatural light on the buckle of the bridle rein lying on his knee. "There was a letter from Pietro this morning. The seigneur wishes me to go. I wish to go. I am leaving tomorrow."

"Going away?" The girl's voice was a wail. "You—taken away from me!" Then in a flash: "I hate Pietro! He is cruel—he thinks only of himself. He wants you—but I don't want you. How can I live without you, Francois?" Then softly, hurriedly, under the weight of the saddle, she sat statue-like in his saddle.

"It is just as I said. You are as much a man as I am. You breathe—and you and my father and Pietro say quite calmly. The air is to be taken away—you must do without it. I can not. I will choke! She uttered an cry suddenly, as if the choking were a physical present fact.

No sighs, no moans, no shade of infection missed Francois; still he sat motionless, his eyes on the little brass buckle, his lips set in a line, without a word, without a look toward her. And suddenly, Alice, with another quick blue glance from under the black long lashes—Alice, hurt, restless, desperate, had struck her horse a sharp blow—and she was on the road before him, galloping away.

He let her go. He sat quiet a long time. As she turned in, still galloping, at the high stone gateway of the chateau, his eyes came back again to the little shining buckle. It seemed the only thing tangible in a dream-universe of rapture and agony. Over and over he heard the words she had said—words which must mean—what? Had they meant it? Had they possibly been mistaken? No—the utter happiness which came with the memory of the soft hurried voice must mean the truth—she cared for him, and then, all at once, without a word, without a word, without a word, she was gone.

"I said that I would give my happiness for my seigneur's; I said that I would be a friend to Pietro; I will."

CHAPTER XVI

The Mother of a Prince.

The walls of the palace at Ancona dropped to the sea; against them the waves danced. Out on the blue water lay a fleet of fishing-boats, and the wind flapped corn sails. It seemed the only thing tangible in a dream-universe of rapture and agony. Over and over he heard the words she had said—words which must mean—what? Had they meant it? Had they possibly been mistaken? No—the utter happiness which came with the memory of the soft hurried voice must mean the truth—she cared for him, and then, all at once, without a word, without a word, without a word, she was gone.

"I said that I would give my happiness for my seigneur's; I said that I would be a friend to Pietro; I will."

CHAPTER XVII

The Boy Before the Escape.

THE day before the escape, as the Prince, weak and ill yet, lay in bed, word was brought that a messenger of the marquis wished to see the Queen.

"I will see him too, my mother," the silent, grave, young man begged. "It may be that I can help you. I wish to help."

In a moment Fritz introduced a slight, alert person whose delicate face was made remarkable by a pair of eyes large and brilliant and full of visionary shadows, yet alive with fire. One saw first those uncommon eyes and then the man; for they had been entirely concerned with his message they might have remarked that he trembled as he looked at the Prince's face; that his voice shook as he answered the Queen's question.

"I have the unhappiness, your Majesty, to bring you bad news," he said, speaking to her, but still gazing eagerly at the Prince. "The Marquis Zappi, my employer, is ill. He was taken suddenly last night, and today is much worse, and there is no chance that he can travel with your Majesty tomorrow."

A Queen threw out her hands with a gesture of helplessness. "What can we do?" she exclaimed. "Am I to plan and have always an unconquerable obstacle? Can I not save my boy? I might have known that every-

the Austrians at the gate of the city, she waited in anxiety almost more intense than she could bear the word of the doctor as to her son. Five days before, at Forli, her older boy had died, and her sore heart stirred with a sickening throbbing as she thought of this other, her only child, lying in the room beyond in a high fever, ill with the disease with which his brother had fallen. A woman's soul might well be overcrowded with such sorrow and such fear, but there was no time to dwell on these things in their lot shortly before with the Italian revolutionists, and had fought, and had distinguished themselves. And now that the revolution of the Romagna was a failure, that the Austrian army was advancing victoriously, now that death had taken the older to safety, the younger—Louis—the invalid lad in the room beyond, was in imminent danger. He was excepted from the general amnesty; the authorities of Tuscany and of Switzerland had let her know that the Prince would not be permitted in those territories. From Rome two of her son's friends, Cardinal Fossati and King de Rome, had sent word that if he were taken by the Austrians he was lost. And at the moment when Hortense had decided to carry her boy off to Italy by way of Corfu, an Austrian fleet appeared in the Adriatic, and the Prince was on board. It will be known that I stay, but they will not molest the ill woman. Do you understand the plan, Fritz?"

"But yes, your Majesty," Fritz answered with his face alight. "And so the packet sailed for Corfu, and all day before the sailing the servants of Hortense moved busily between the palace and the quay, carrying luggage and making arrangements. And only one or two knew the secret: that Prince Louis Bonaparte had not sailed in the packet, but lay cowering with fever in a little room beyond his mother's, carried by her greater privacy by Fritz and the doctor."

Two days later, as the Queen sat quietly by her boy's bedside, she heard that the vanguard of the Austrians had entered the city, and almost at once Fritz came to tell her that the Prince had been taken to the hospital in which she was staying had been chosen for the residence of the general commanding. The probability of this had not entered her mind; it seemed too late to say. The Austrian officer demanded the Queen's own chamber for his chief, but when the steward's wife told him the name of the lady who was in the rooms which he had chosen, he turned away, deeply and said no word. It was another of that brotherhood scattered over Europe—the friends of Hortense—it was an officer who had protected her years before at Dijon.

So for a week they lived side by side with their enemies and only a few feet lay between the Prince and capture, for his room was next that of the Austrian general, with but a double door between. It was a life of momentary anxiety, for the Queen feared each time the invalid spoke that they might recognize a man's voice: when he coughed she turned away. But at the end of the week Louis was at last well enough to go. He was to leave Ancona disguised as one of his mother's lackeys, the young Marquis Zappi was to put on another suit, and over their frontier they were to change and he the son of Hortense traveling on the Englishman's passport.

CHAPTER XVII.

THE day before the escape, as the Prince, weak and ill yet, lay in bed, word was brought that a messenger of the marquis wished to see the Queen.

"I will see him too, my mother," the silent, grave, young man begged. "It may be that I can help you. I wish to help."

In a moment Fritz introduced a slight, alert person whose delicate face was made remarkable by a pair of eyes large and brilliant and full of visionary shadows, yet alive with fire. One saw first those uncommon eyes and then the man; for they had been entirely concerned with his message they might have remarked that he trembled as he looked at the Prince's face; that his voice shook as he answered the Queen's question.

"I have the unhappiness, your Majesty, to bring you bad news," he said, speaking to her, but still gazing eagerly at the Prince. "The Marquis Zappi, my employer, is ill. A Queen threw out her hands with a gesture of helplessness. "What can we do?" she exclaimed. "Am I to plan and have always an unconquerable obstacle? Can I not save my boy? I might have known that every-possible that after all they should—she looked at her son; her courage came springing back. "They shall not take you and my eyes flashed defiance at a world of enemies, and she went over and threw her arm about his neck. "Louis, don't let yourself be vexed, dearest. They shall not take you. I can save you."

It was as if she put a spur to her brain; there was a moment's silence and the two lads watched her brows together under the concentration of her brain.

"Of course," she said suddenly, and laughed—a spontaneous laughter which seemed to flood her with youthfulness. She turned her blue glance swiftly on the newcomer, the slender boy with the brilliant eyes. "You are in the employ of the Marquis Zappi, Monsieur?"

"But yes, your Majesty. I am the secretary of Monsieur le Marquis," she answered a second seemed to take the look of the young man, of his looks, of his bearing, his accent.

"You are French. Have you a sympathy with the family of my son, with the Bonapartes?"

"It was as if a door had been opened into a furnace, so the eyes blazed. "Your Majesty, I would give my life for his Highness," he said quietly. The impassive face of the young Prince turned toward the speaker, and the half-smile, heavy-lidded, which had the Napoleonic gift of holding a picture, rested on him attentively. Louis Bonaparte seemed to remember something.

"That is your name, Monsieur?" he asked, and it might have been noticed that his head lifted a little from the pillow as he waited for the answer. "Francois Bonaparte, sire." The young man seemed to be out of breath. "Sire," Louis Napoleon repeated. And then, "I have seen you before. Where was it? Not in Rome—not in Switzerland—ah! His hand went out, and with that Francis was on his knees by the bedside, and had kissed the outstretched thin fingers, and the Prince's other hand was on his shoulder fraternally.

"The old chateau of Vicoques—my playmate, Francois, told me that you were going to remember, didn't he?" Louis Napoleon demanded, laughing joyfully. "Mother, he saved my life from the falling wall. Do you remember the story of my runaway trip?" And Hortense, smiling delightedly to see her son so pleased and exhilarated, did remember, and was gracious and grateful to the young Frenchman. "It is a good omen to have you come to us today," she said with all the dazzling charm which she knew how to throw into a sentence. And then, eager with the headlong zest of a hunter for the game, she caught her breath and said: "You would risk something to save him, would you not? You will take the place of the marquis and travel with us tomorrow, and help me carry away the Prince to safety?"

Dinner Stories

A traveling salesman some time ago asked a one-armed mendicant by whom he was accosted how he lost his arm.

"I was like this, sir. The last time I went to sea, we were caught in a typhoon off Cape Orin. The ship went over on her beam ends, so the cap'n 'e orders me and Tom to go out on the yardarm to keelhaul the bosprit and let splice the jib-boom on to the top-sailant rattins, when Tom suddenly let go his end, and I was pitched forty feet in the 'old."

The gentleman smiled. "That's a capital yarn," he said. "You ought to have been assailed, and went on his way."

Crestfallen the beggar watched his interrogator, and saw a crossing sweeper touch his hat most deferentially to him.

"Who's 'e when 'e's at 'ome?" he called.

"'Him?" replied the sweeper. "Don't you know who that is? Why, that's Admiral Dewey."

Two lovers were sitting side by side in Battery park, New York, one evening.

"Wonder," he whispered, as he gazed out across the beautiful bay and saw the statue of liberty in the shadowy gloom, "I wonder why they have lit so small?"

"Perhaps," replied the girl, as she blushed and tried to help from his embrace, "the smaller the light the greater the liberty."

"Optimists are all right, provided they are not unreasonable and excessive," said a Fusion leader at a Fusion luncheon in New York.

"The optimism of our opponents," he went on, "reminds me of Smith. A druggist said to Smith one night at the lodge:

"There's a movement on foot to make drugs cheaper."

"Good!" said Smith. "Good! That will bring sickness within the reach of all!"

ALCOHOL DEATH TO BEAUTY, DECLARES LILLIAN RUSSELL

Famous Star Says Drink Is Bad For Mind, Body and Soul.

"ALCOHOL is death to the beauty of mind, body and soul." Lillian Russell, one of America's most celebrated beauties and beauty experts, pronounces that judgment in the course of her monologue in connection with her appearance at the head of the Lillian Russell All Star Feature Festival which John Cort is offering.

Miss Russell gives out the real secret of the preservation of her own wonderful beauty, physique and health in this final and positive declaration, for the actress, who has been on this earth for a good many years, never indulged in anything stronger than Madeira wine, and for years she hasn't even tasted Madeira.

Every audience from pit to gallery responds to Miss Russell's declaration with a great demonstration of applause, whether it is a matinee audience of women or a night audience with a large proportion of men.

Why They Applaud.

It is the applause, however, that causes some of the blase element in the theater to look around and wonder why an expression of that sort of sentiment should start a noise. Miss Russell explains the reason:

"People applaud that sentiment because they know it is true. Many of them know it to their great sorrow. There are few people in this world who haven't suffered in some way from alcoholic excesses. I don't mean that they suffered through their own act, but through the acts of others.

"Reformed drunkards don't make all that applause. Various kinds of humanity contribute to the demonstration. For instance, mothers suffering through the acts of children who have drunk to excess and worked their ruin, wives whose lives have been made miserable by drunken husbands—they constitute some of the people who applaud that remark.

"Yes, and fathers who drink themselves and who know it is wrong and who dread the day when they will see their own sons and daughters drinking the vile stuff—they applaud that sentiment.

Likes to Preach Temperance.

"I don't desire to preach in my monologue. It wouldn't seem quite in place, but I would like to go further than I really do. I've seen the ruin brought on by drink, seen it in endless variety, and if I dared I'd like to go out there on the stage and talk nothing else.

"People regard it as remarkable that I have succeeded so long keeping my health and my good looks, but those people don't know the schedule I followed in accomplishing the result. You can't keep your beauty and you can't keep your health unless you live in harmony with nature.

"That which most men and women need is healthful exercise, nourishing food and a proper amount of sleep. And people who stay up till all hours of the night don't get the proper amount of sleep nor do they get their sleep at the right time.

"I have made it a rule of life never to remain up until the small hours of the morning.

"I always have loathed champagne as well as all other strong drinks, and I have constantly fought against the cultivation of a taste for liquor.

"Madeira wine is sweet and regarded as about as near harmless as any wine, yet I quit drinking it, even moderately, because I was afraid of it.

"I have adhered strictly to my rule of healthful physical exercise, and I believe the most beneficial exercise for man or woman is the punching bag. If every one would pummel the punching bag as regularly as I do, tuberculosis of the lungs would disappear from the ranks of the human race.

"Now, to get back to the liquor problem: If people who hear me in the theater and read what I write will follow my rules of exercise they will have no appetite for alcoholic beverages. The craving for it will disappear.

"Laziness, idleness, contribute to alcoholic uses. I tell them in my monologue that idleness is the source of laziness, and it is that same idleness that begets the desire to drink—to drink to enormous excess, which is accompanied by other dissipations and finally spells ruin.

Drink Is Chorus Girls' Ruin.

"In my many years with the Weber & Fields shows I have seen good, sweet, healthy girls enter the chorus. Many of them had never tasted liquor. Many of them continued their good habits and succeeded. But the moving picture of the girl who starts with the supposed innocent drinks and finally cultivates the taste for wine and whiskey is a pitiful thing to behold.

"There are a thousand examples in the show business to prove that the girl who drinks can't last, that she will go to certain ruin and go quickly. There are thousands of other examples, too, to show that the girl who leaves beer and whiskey and wine alone and perseveres in her work, the while living a normal life, is the girl who succeeds.

"It is the same in all other lines of worldly endeavor. The man or woman who drinks falls by the wayside. The man or woman who leaves it alone continues to climb."

World Is Getting Better.

In concluding her dressing room monologue on alcoholic fatalities Miss Russell rendered a peroration which was the quintessence of optimism. Listen to this, just as she spoke it:

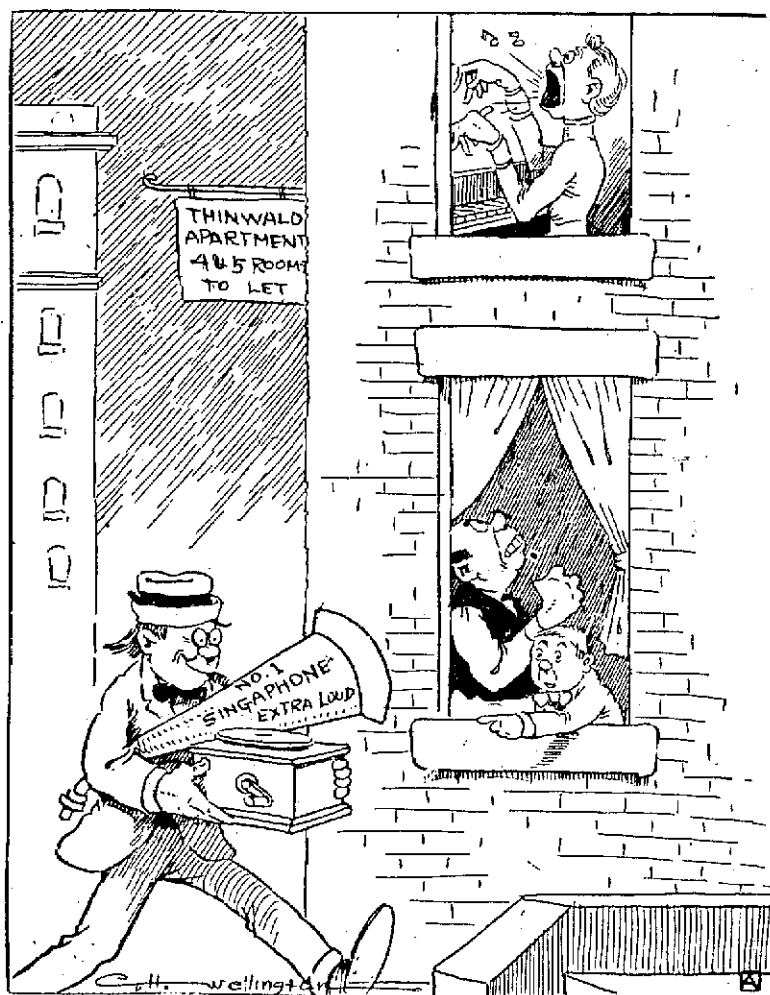

"The world is getting better because keen minded men and women are using less alcohol. A wine salesman told me recently that the amount of champagne consumed these days is two-thirds less than it was ten years ago. Another champagne man that I know has decided to quit the business. There is not enough money in it.

"There is less whisky drunk now than formerly. Men in responsible positions have quit drinking. They don't dare drink because the people with whom they deal won't permit it.

"A few years ago it was thought that some people had to drink. Nowadays it is different. There is no one in this age who has to drink, who is expected to drink, and there are countless thousands who don't drink. Their position in life depends upon abstinence.

"Employers of men don't want employees who drink. The answer to the riddle is easy. A man who drinks moderately is in imminent peril of becoming a drunkard, and a drunkard is no good to himself or any one else."

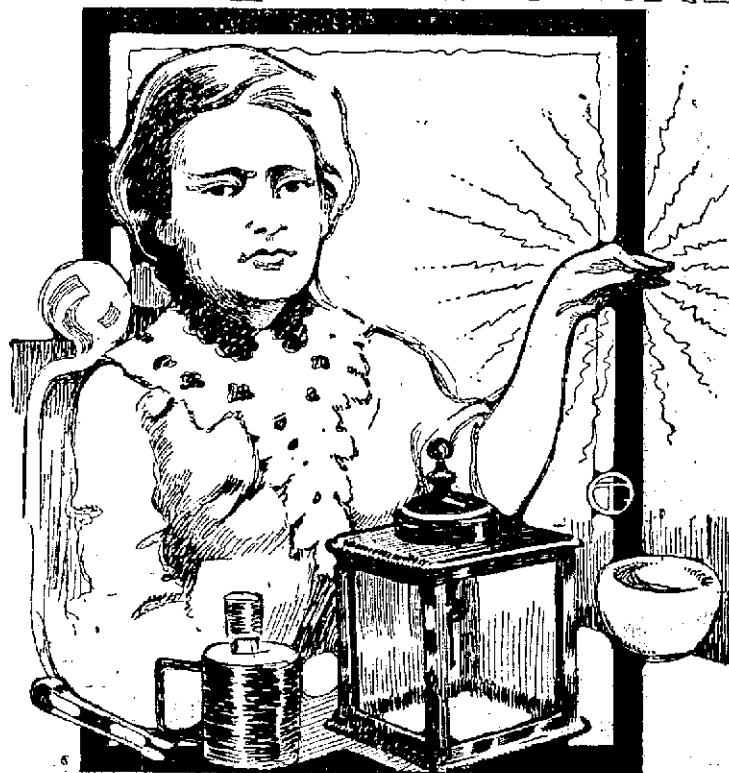

---and the Worst is Yet to Come

EASY ENOUGH.

SideLights On The Circus Business By D. W. WATT

Many years ago with one of the country was a bare back rider whose fame was world wide and I think without a doubt he was the greatest bare back rider before or since his time. This man was a hard worker in his business, often practicing his act between every afternoon and evening show, so that he was wedded to his art—that of a great bareback rider.

He was one of the best drawing cards that was possible for a manager to secure in those days and many times in large cities there would be hundreds of people who knew about the time he would go into the ring and they would buy tickets, come into the show, watch his act and go back again to their business.

But with all this this man was not a good fellow and he absolutely knew nothing about the management of a great show, yet in his opinion he knew far more than his employer who had been in the business for more than a score of years. Many times he would make it his business to visit among the working people and the performers in the dressing tent, many of whom drew less than 10 per cent possibly of his great salary, and try to persuade upon them the necessity of their getting more money for their work. Many times he would talk to the working people about the cook tent and say to them that they should go in to the management and demand better meals and better service.

Many times in the show business your contract would call for so much money, your meals and lodging, yet it was the custom on long Sunday runs or in case of a wreck when you would be late in getting into a town in the morning that everybody was supposed to look out for themselves.

On Saturday everybody around the show, if it was to be a long Sunday run, could be found down town at the different restaurants, getting their lunches ready for Sunday, for in such cases they always provided for themselves.

This great rider owned his own horse, one of the best ring horses in the business, and also had a groom to take care of him. He too brought his horse and groom, but kept account of everything he spent in this way, and when the season was about half over he presented a bill to the ticket wagon of $28 for money spent in his way.

Now it was not more than two or three weeks till the rider's horse was taken home and it was impossible for him to use him in the ring and his contract called for him to use his own horse for his act. They were so good ring horses with the show and to get one of these was the only way out of it for this rider to finish his season. He was given the best ring horse with the show and his own horse did not recover for the balance of something like eighteen weeks, and all this time riding a horse that belonged to the show. His salary, or at least part of it, was gradually held back and when the season closed and the time came to settle the management of the show charged him something like $1,800 for the use of the horse.

This of course made trouble and it was taken into the courts and carried up to the supreme court and the great rider lost every suit. And it not only cost him a lot of money, but it put him in bad with this show, but with all the other big shows, and it was only a short time till this same great rider was looking for a position with the smaller shows who could not afford to pay the salary he had been used to.

From this time on this great rider never got back with any of the big shows and many years ago he died a poor man, practically without friends. And this only goes to show that be it with a circus or any other kind of business it pays to be a good fellow and do as others do in the business, which you have to do for your life's work, or as the old saying goes, "If you're in Rome be the least bit Romanish and you'll be all right."

For one who is continually carrying a grudge with him and finding fault it is only a matter of time till his friends will be on the other side of the street. While you may be a booster and a good fellow and wear a smile at all times in your business and not get rich, yet you will be better satisfied with yourself and have more friends. And surely when the sun does shine it will hit you from the time.

Last Monday James K. Sebree died at his home, 1130 South Michigan Boulevard, Chicago. Jim Sebree, as he was familiarly known in Chicago, where he had been in the hotel business for nearly forty years, was a character different from many others. Fall of eighteen and seventy three that Jim Sebree came to Janesville with the Burr Robbins Show and spent the winter. "The animal house" which served as a kind of headquarters for the people during the winter, for it was here that they had a kind of little office in one corner of the building, was the old stone structure that still stands in the rear of the city hall and is owned by Frank D. Kimball and used as a store house for furniture.

Jim Sebree boarded that winter at what was known as the Stevens house, on the southwest corner of Dodge and Franklin streets, and is now known as the Interurban Hotel.

A man by the name of Chauncey Stevens was the landlord and Mr. Stevens had a family of two boys and one daughter. The daughter, an auburn haired girl of about sixteen years of age whose name was Capitola, was bright and smart and it was not long if that it was the following year, possibly the spring of 1875, that Jim Sebree married Capitola and shortly after left for Chicago, where he went into business and a few years later with a partner opened up the Saratoga hotel and it soon became famous all over the country, and it was here that Jim Sebree was to be found almost every day in the year for some time like thirty years.

Through all these years I knew him well, and while he was a hard master to work for and a hard headed close-fisted business man, yet Jim Sebree had a reputation that but few other hotel men ever had. It is known all over Chicago that he never turned a man out of his hotel for non-payment of a bill. In scores of cases where a man would get stranded there and expect money from home or from friends and would be disappointed, Jim Sebree would always help him out of town with $10 or $20, and many times would say, "Young man, if you get rich you owe me this, but if you don't get rich you owe me nothing."

Jim was naturally a speculator and carried through many big deals and heavy mortgages and a big debt, never bothered him if he thought it looked as though there was a bountiful harvest ahead. And at the time of his death he was still the head of the Saratoga Hotel Company, but his son Ray for some time has been the acting manager of the hotel. Jim Sebree had amassed a fortune of half a million dollars, but his time came and he had to go just the same as the man that had not lived the busy life that he had, and there will be many an old time show man that he has helped over the rough places in life who will mourn his loss.

McIntyre and Heath, who are now playing an engagement at the American Music Hall in Chicago, were both originally with the circus. Heath being a clown and McIntyre a bare back rider and I think in the early seventies put in at least part of one season with the Burr Robbins Show.

They were the first to introduce the negro dances on the stage forty years ago, and they have not been separated in forty years. McIntyre has earned $300,000 in his "Georgia Minstrel" suit.

Walking railroad ties after failure of their first minstrel show led to the creation of "ban tree" and "biscuit bush," over which the comedians have made millions laugh.

Both learned all about negroes, whom they imitate while acting as cooks on Mississippi river steamers. Heath was born in Philadelphia and is 57 years old. McIntyre was born in Wisconsin and is 55 years old.

They always occupy the same dressing room and have never had a disagreement. The contract with their manager is for four years at a joint salary of $75,000 a season.

The Theater

Lillian Russell.

Lillian Russell and her Feature Festival with its own special orchestra, and forty famous specialty artists, will hold forth at the Myers Theatre Tuesday, Nov. 25. The attraction, it is claimed, is the most expensive theatrical amusement on tour in America.

Miss Russell's weekly financial exaction alone, "it said," would cover the cost of the most pretentious dramatic attraction, and the combined salaries of the enterprise, the manager declares, would more than finance the most extravagant musical comedy, comic opera, and even most so-called grand opera companies. The organization as a whole is supposed to cost John Cort more than the expense of conducting any theatrical enterprise in the United States. The company travels on its own special private train of eight Pullman cars—these not merely on special trips, but as a regular equipment. Two cars, the "Mozart" and "Forum," are occupied by Miss Russell and her four daughters; the other six supply the traveling comforts of the rest of the company. The attraction is touring to the Pacific coast mainly to fill special engagements at the Cort Theatres of the far west, and a few towns and cities are being played on the way.

Important places on route are not visited owing to lack of time and the limited season of the organization. Lillian Russell will sing one or two of the songs that made her famous as the queen of comic opera, and a new type of motion-pictures will depict the fair lady's daily routine in the propagation of health, youth and beauty. Incidentally, she will display the latest fashions in Paris and London gowns—a collection of stunning female fads and fancies the renowned beauty made during her summer va-vacation tour. Her so-called disrobing act is by no means as sensational as the news she reports; she merely discards herself of outer garments—furs, coats, jackets, outer apparel, etc., donning and discarding those in her display of women's fashionable attire.

Mr. Cort will present ANNA FIELD and her Parisian Varieties in this city soon after the advent of Lillian Russell.

"Stop Thief."

All the world loves to laugh, yet once in a while you will find a human being who has a "grouch" and wouldn't laugh if it was to save his life. If there is such a person in town, he should go and see "Stop Thief," when that play is presented at the Myers Theatre Friday, Nov. 28. I guarantee he will laugh his head off. No human being could witness this new farce without enjoying many a hearty laugh. When the play was first produced at the Gaiety Theatre, New York, the audience and also the hardened dramatic critics began to laugh three minutes after the curtain went up on the first act, and they continued to laugh for the balance of the evening. Even Alan Dale, considered the most hardened critic in New York, acknowledged in the New York Journal that he never laughed as much in one night before. The ridiculous situations in the play convulse an audience, and that is what makes a play a success.

There is no place where you can spend your money and get as much for it as in the classified columns.

FOREMAN SENTENCED TO YEAR IN WAUPUN

Young Man Who Ignored Parole Under Commitment Law Is Giving Night.

Louis Pfeiffer, alias Leroy Foreman, played the part of an irresponsible child, ignored the parole law upon which he had received explicit instructions before being hired out to a farmer near Edgerton, and when he skipped, did not have foresight enough to get out of the county and make a good job of it. As a result he has drawn one year at Waupun, being sentenced by Judge Clark in the Beloit court. He was taken to Waupun today by Sheriff Whipple.

Pfeiffer, who is 40 years old, was committed for habitual drunkenness. For twenty years he has worked at various trades and positions. At his last commitment, in Janesville, his ten-day sentence was commuted to a parole and he was placed on the farm, with definite instructions as to the course to pursue if he found conditions too hard.

Farm labor was not to his liking, and the only excuse he can offer for jumping his parole was that he was insufficiently clothed to withstand the winter snap. Although he had been promised more clothing upon the return of his employer in the evening, Pfeiffer departed, making his way to Beloit, where after working two days he was again locked up on a charge of drunkenness.

Pfeiffer looks and acts intelligent, and testifies to having held clerical positions during the course of his wanderings. District Attorney Duxwiddie pointed out clearly that there was no extenuating circumstances, and a maximum penalty for the offense was administered.

"Do you feel that the world is any the better for your having been in it?" asked Judge Clark in the course of his examination. Pfeiffer has never been married, and has no one depending upon him.
